An Argentine Change.
What Will Maine Do?
Too Many Law Factories.
S. W. Straus, A Builder.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

THE ARGENTINE revolution is successful. As this is written, former President Irigoyen is ill and a prisoner in the military barracks at La Plata, and strict military law rules the country. For some time after a white flag was displayed from the government building at Buenos Aires it was not known what had become of Irigoyen.

ONE RESULT of the revolution may be closer relations between this country and the Argentine. Irigoyen did not like the United States. We grew too fast to please him, and this he indicated by refusing, at intervals, to send any representative to Washington. There is none there at this moment.

If he can and will come here, now, we shall try to prove that we are not as bad as he thought.

TODAY MAINE elects a senator, and wise ones predict a gain for the Democrats. Republicans will win, as a matter of course.

The Maine election is studied carefully by politicians. Coming ahead of other elections, it shows how the people feel.

What citizens think of the slump, and their view on "who is to blame," may be gathered from the Maine vote.

The dull registration seems to indicate that the Maine people are not much interested.

PRESIDENT LOWELL, of Harvard, says our national law-making factories are too numerous, and too busy. He speaks of 49 law factories, griding out laws at high speed, referring to the 48 state legislatures, and the National Congress.

He might say 98 factories, the upper and lower houses of the 48 states, plus the Senate and House in Washington, and the White House, legislating by suggestion, most properly, makes the number 99.

PRESIDENT LOWELL says that there exist in America more statutes than automobiles, which is perhaps an exaggeration, as automobiles number about 25,000,000.

Of all the laws, the only one that attracts much attention is the prohibition law, and that is, unfortunately, flouted by the "respectable," exploited to the tune of billions a year by the criminals, and takes up the energy of government that ought to be concentrated on something more constructive than bootlegging.

S. W. STRAUS, who died in New York yesterday, was one of the most constructively useful Americans of his generation.

He encouraged and facilitated building and did more than any man, at the close of the war, to make up for lack of some building during the war years.

Ignoring many opportunities for profit, he instructed his organization, which covers the United States, to concentrate on the financing of dwellings only. And he co-operated generously and wisely with those whom he knew to be competent builders.

MR. STRAUS' death is a severe loss to many friends and to wisely conservative business methods. It will not, however, affect the work of his carefully constructed organization, the S. W. Straus Company.

Seriously ill for more than a year past, Mr. Straus had withdrawn from any active share in his business for more than two years previous to his death.

THAT BUSINESS will be carried on by men carefully selected by him long ago — Mr. Roberts, the president of the company, Mr. Klee, Mr. Straus' nephew; Mr. Laun, in charge of real estate loans, and Mr. S. J. T. Straus, brother of the late S. W. Straus.

FAR APART in some principles, Stalin of Russia and Mussolini of Italy agree on certain points.

They agree that when you have identified your enemies, or those that ignore your orders, the wise thing is to shoot them, and lose no time.

Every little while Russia shoots a group, small or large, for political offenses, and Italy has just executed four young Jugo-Slavs accused of "terrorism." One of the Jugo-Slavs is alleged to have confessed a plot to assassinate Mussolini.

The four condemned were blindfolded, bound to chairs, their backs to the firing squad, and shot to death by 56 "Black Shirts."

THE MEN WERE shot the day after conviction, under a law that punishes with death conspiracy against the life of the king, other royalty and the chief of the government, namely Mussolini.

There is no capital punishment in Italy for ordinary non-political murders. But the life imprisonment is real life imprisonment, in solitude.

MRS. RUTH McCORMICK, an intelligent woman, well fitted to represent and work for Illinois in the United States Senate, may be defeated by the "drys," and especially by the votes of women.

An independent dry lady running against her cannot be elected, but she may get enough votes to defeat Mrs. McCormick and elect Mr. Lewis.

HE IS AND always has been as wet as the Gulf stream. Mrs. McCormick, while she would obey her state's mandate if it voted wet, is theoretically, and in her personal habits, as dry as the inside of a blast furnace.

Thus, the good dry ladies of Illinois, including the W. C. T. U., may defeat Mrs. McCormick, who is dry at heart, and elect Mr. Lewis, who is wet inside and

Mayor Kline Arrives From Foreign Shore

WILL QUIT POLITICS, MAYOR SAYS

Back From Europe, Executive Denies He'll Go on Bench; In Pittsburgh Tomorrow

By WILLIAM PFAFF
Staff Correspondent.

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—Mayor Kline was back from Europe today with an informal announcement of his retirement when his present term expires.

This reporter for the Sun-Telegraph met the mayor a few miles out in the Atlantic Ocean and talked with him on the steamer Conte Grande in Quarantine last night.

The Mayor was told that a vaudeville psychic had dared to predict that he should resign the mayoralty and return to the bench for the sake of his health. He answered:

"No, I won't. There are no vacancies on Common Pleas, anyhow, and I'm not going to resign. I'll serve my term out and retire from everything. I'm 55—that's pretty old."

SURPRISED AT BANQUET

The Mayor was surprised and pleased to meet a Pittsburgh reporter in the Atlantic Ocean, although his critical sartorial eye seemed to be saying that the reporter was no Grover Whalen.

Anyhow, the Mayor was genuinely surprised at one home-town report given him. He refused to believe that the ward chairmen of Pittsburgh were arranging a home-coming banquet. He said:

"Before I go to banquets, I go home and eat."

Returning with the Mayor were Mrs. Kline and their nephew, Harrison Johnson, Jr. They were met at the pier by Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Johnson, Sr., and Attorney Ben Steinberg. The Mayor seemed pleased that Steinberg, in New York to visit a relative, showed up at the docks when he read that the Mayor was returning.

TOLD OF McARDLE

The Mayor exhibited mild surprise when told that Inspector J. J. McArdle had been reduced and he asked for the particulars. This is what he was told:

"Well, according to the gossip, McArdle was trying to run Goose Goslin out of the numbers racket and put in Hunky Joe Levandowski, and Magistrate Sweeney and Francis Kirley, the ward chairman, were lined up against McArdle, so Clark reduced him, and McArdle went on pension."

Simply by way of information and without relating to the foregoing statement, the Mayor said:

"McArdle was one of Joe Armstrong's boys."

The Mayor indicated that he would uphold Clark's action, although he said that first he must study Clark's explanation. As to whether Acting Inspector Charles Cahill or Lieut. Harry Moore would get the vacant inspector's job, Kline said he preferred to wait until he got home before de-

DISCOVERIES TRACE LOST ITALIANS

Experts Believe Explorers' Airship Crashed on Same Arctic Island as Balloon

By ARNE KILDAL.
(Copyright, 1930, International News Service.)

TROMSOE, Norway, Sept. 8.—Expert opinion was advanced today that the polar expedition of the Italian airship Italia, headed by Commander Umberto Nobile, was wrecked on White Island in 1928, at almost the spot where Salomon Auguste Andree and his companions had perished 30 years before.

This belief grew out of the reported discovery, near the Andree camp, of a third skeleton by the second searching party sent to the island to gather up any remains of the Andree expedition which might have been overlooked by Dr. Gunnar Horn and his party, which brought most of the remains here for inspection and disposal.

FIND PART OF BALLOON

In addition to the third skeleton, the second searching party reported it had found a portion of what was believed to have been Andree's balloon, in which he attempted to drift over the North Pole from Spitzbergen in 1897.

Dr. Holmboe, Norwegian member of the Swedish-Norwegian expert committee, which examined all the Andree remains brought here, said today he believed the new discoveries were remains of the Italia expedition and not of the Andree camp.

The committee is considering whether to publish brief extracts from the diary found on Andree's body with a view to clearing up the situation arising from these new discoveries, Dr. Holmboe said.

Entries made by Andree in the diary are expected to show con-

6 SEA TRIPS OFFERED GIRLS

Gloria Swanson Sponsoring One Voyage to Paris, Five To Bermuda in Contest

At last the dream of a lifetime may come true!

Deep down in her heart, every girl at some time or another has had a desire to go to Paris. And here comes the opportunity. Gloria Swanson has made it possible by offering to girls, through the Sun-Telegraph, the opportunity of a lifetime—a trip to Paris, first-class accommodations everywhere, a passage on one of the most palatial trans-Atlantic liners, de luxe hotels in Paris, all expenses paid and extra money to spend. Paris, you may know, is the background of Miss Swanson's new picture, "What a Widow!"

FIVE OTHER TRIPS

To amplify this magnificent offer made by Miss Swanson, the Sun-Telegraph is offering five additional trips for girl readers of this newspaper. These will take in a week at glorious Bermuda, two days out on the Atlantic, tropical in climate when it's winter here, unsurpassed scenic environment, marvelously flaming flowers, world's greatest golf links, sea beach bathing, the wonders of coral formation, historic towns—a tour never to be forgotten.

For the purpose of a fair distribution in the award of these free

Dancing Teacher Held in Shooting

WASHINGTON, Sept. —(AP.)—Barbara Walker, a 25-year-old dancing teacher, was held today by police, who said she admitted shooting Russell Prince, 23, when Prince refused to let her leave his apartment last night.

No charges have been filed. Physicians said they thought Prince, wounded in the abdomen and wrist, was not in a serious condition.

Death Plunge Laid To Fear of Disease

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—(INS.)—A fear that she was a victim of tuberculosis caused Gwendolyn M. Fallard, 29, of Milwaukee, to end her life by jumping from a ninth-story window of a hotel, her friends said today.

Her suicide followed the departure of a friend, Beatrice Turrell, of Tacoma, Wash., for Europe.

Mother Obtains Soldier's Discharge

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—(AP.)—The War Department has honored the request of Mrs. Anna L. Machner, Hamburg, Pa., that her son, Private Elwood F. Johnson, be discharged from the Army because of dependency. Private Johnson served with the 49th Bombardment Squadron, Air Corps, at Langley Field, Va.

Donora Girl Dies From Rusty Nail

Lucille Mosbaugh, 15, of 624 Fifth avenue, Donora, died today in the McKeesport Hospital from lockjaw. The girl was injured in her home August 30 when she stepped on a rusty nail protruding from a loose board.

BLUE LAW BAN HALTS TENNIS

North Side police records today revealed the Blue Law ban has been extended to include tennis in that district.

Lieut. James Callahan, out to stop miniature golf games, in obedience to orders of Public Safety Director Clark and Police Supt. Walsh, yesterday afternoon, ordered six couples off the courts in West Park, according to the police reports.

Two spectators, arrested when police broke up a Sunday baseball game at Arlington avenue and Telescope street in pursuance of the Blue Law crusade, were arraigned in South Side Police Court today, charged with disorderly conduct.

They were Albert Forner, 24, of 2724 Oakley street, and Walter Hess, 30, of 2806½ Larkins way.

Magistrate John J. Sweeney discharged them with a warning.

Names of managers of Bromberg and the Twenty-seventh Street All Stars teams were taken by police.

A mushball game was halted in Oakland yesterday. No midget golf games were reported stopped.

Pittsburgh Man Assails Coal Rates

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—(AP.)—A. B. McElvaney, of Pittsburgh, representing the Western Pennsylvania Coal Traffic Bureau, today appeared before the Interstate Commerce Commission to protest freight rates on coal from southern fields to tidewater. Joining in the complaint were the Central Pennsylvania Coal Producers' Association and the Somerset-Meyersdale Coal Traffic Bureau.

German Sea Fliers Prepare for Voyage

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—(INS.)—Capt. Wolfgang von Gronau and his three companions, who crossed the Atlantic from Germany in a flying boat, were in New York today preparing for their departure by steamer to Germany the latter part of the week. They attended a reception Sunday in Atlantic City.

LEAGUE KILLS BRIAND PLAN

GENEVA, Sept. 8.—(AP.)—Foreign Minister Aristide Briand's scheme for a "United States of Europe," as outlined in his memorandum of May 17, died a gentle death at the hands of the 26 nations invited to participate with France when their representatives discussed the project in the council of the League of Nations today.

That the memorandum of May 17 is dead and that from the replies already published and the free discussion of them at this session and in the assembly to come will arise a new conception of organized European action was the general opinion of the outstanding diplomats concerned with the subject.

The council of the League of Nations announced today the amicable settlement of the situation which had arisen as the result of the mandates commission's recent frank criticisms of British administration in Palestine.

The situation was settled "with peace and honor for all," according to a statement made at the opening session of the council.

Lady Horne, Friend Drowned in Auto

BRUSSELS, Sept. 8.—(AP.)—Lady Horne, wife of Sir Allen Horne, of London, and an unidentified companion were drowned early today when, dazzled by the beams from a lighthouse, they drove their motor car into the River Scheldt. They were trying to run the machine on the ferryboat that plies between Antwerp and Sainte Anne. The chauffeur was unconscious when he was rescued.

Two Men Crushed By Falling Pipe Die

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Sept. 8.—(AP.)—Two men were killed while hoisting a seven-foot pipe which broke loose and fell on them at the Cambria plant of the Bethlehem Steel Company.

Frank Krajac, 47, of Johnstown, died instantly and Marko Peuracha, 60, of Cambria, died two hours later.

Pool Raiders Find Game Flown

The big "numbers" men of East Liberty have moved from their alleged headquarters on the second floor of 6335 Penn avenue—"for the good of the service."

The removal became obvious today to Lieut. John Jones when at noon he led a squad of his East End police on a raid of the "headquarters." After the heavy boots of the officer had removed the obstacle of a locked door, he found little to confiscate.

Lieut. Jones found only a few gum bands, some paper clips, a few order books and a stand for an adding machine.

Chevalier Booked For $20,000 Week

PARIS, Sept. 8.—(AP.)—Maurice Chevalier, stage and talkie star, is to make $20,000 a week. A theater here has engaged him at that figure for two weeks in November.

Husband Killed, Wife Hurt by Lightning

MADISON, Wis., Sept. 8.—(AP.)—Standing under a tree while his arm encircled his wife, Paul Henning, 34, was killed by lightning yesterday. His wife suffered burns but was not critically injured.

ALL ARGENTINA BACKS URIBURU

BUENOS AIRES, Sept. 8.—(AP.)—The revolution which Saturday night overthrew the government by President Hipolito Irigoyen and established a new regime headed by Gen. Jose Evaristo Uriburu today spread to every corner of the republic. Province after province telegraphed its adhesion to the new order.

Federal interventors were removed, and new provincial government heads, designated by the Junta or provisional government installed by Gen. Uriburu at Buenos Aires took charge.

RETURN TO WORK

In Buenos Aires citizens returned to work today after retirement of President Irigoyen in favor of Vice President Martinez, mutiny of the Army and Navy, actual resignation of President Irigoyen and his internment, practically a prisoner, in a military barracks, and establishment of a new government headed by Gen. Uriburu, 44-year-old opposition leader.

Martial law continued in force today and the atmosphere was

4 HURT IN PLAY WITH DYNAMITE

One boy had three fingers blown off and three others were burned about the legs in Forward avenue yesterday while playing with dynamite caps, according to a report received today by Squirrel Hill police.

Andrew Mesko, 16, of 13 Acorn street, lost three fingers on his right hand when he struck one of the caps with a rock, police say. Clement Sophko, 15, of 207 Forward avenue; James Sheisso, 13, of 309 Forward avenue, and Paul Cuchsko, 12, of 355 Naylor street, were burned about the legs.

The Mesko boy was taken to the Mercy Hospital. The others were treated at a physician's office, and later were taken to their homes. Police recovered 149 caps the boys had, they said.

The boys will be questioned today about where they got the caps, police said.

200 Civilians Killed In Chinese Air Raid

LONDON, Sept. 8.—(INS.)—Two hundred civilians were killed today when Cantonese Army planes swooped low over the city of Nanning, in the southern part of Kwangsi Province, showering down scores of bombs, evening newspapers reported.

The bombardment threw the population of the city into a panic and caused extensive damage to Chinese property. Forty thousand civilians were reported to have evacuated the city within the last few days.

Two Men, Each 104, Enjoy Plane Ride

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 8.—(AP.)—Galusha Cole, of Pasadena, and Dr. Mirza Assad U. Fareed, of Los Angeles, took a ride in an airplane yesterday and agreed it was the most interesting thing they had done in more than a century.

Each is 104 years old. Dr. Fareed was born in Persia, and taught history in the University of Ishpahan in his native land for half a century.

Judge's $5 Gift Enables Woman to Serve on Jury

Judge Samuel H. Gardner, making his initial appearance in Criminal Court this morning, played the role of the "Good Samaritan."

The jurist was hearing excuses offered by 240 talesmen who did not wish to serve on the jury when a young married woman confronted him and said she couldn't serve on the jury because her husband was out of work and she didn't have carfare to come to the city.

Feeling that the woman otherwise would be glad to earn the wages of a juror, Judge Gardner, from under his official robe, produced his own pocketbook and advanced the woman $5. She will serve on the jury.

Temperature 115, Boulder Dam Town Site Changed

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—(AP.)—A 115-degree temperature at the site first chosen for the so-far-nameless town which will house Boulder Dam workers led the Interior Department today to change the location.

The department selected a new site on the Nevada side of the Colorado River "three miles further back at the top of the ridge and at an elevation of 1,400 feet."

A temperature 13 degrees lower has been found at the higher site, considered of sufficient advantage to "warrant the acception of the town site at the top of the ridge."

LONG HOLDS TROOPS IN READINESS FOR RIOTS AT POLLS

NEW ORLEANS TENSE FOR PRIMARY

Governor, Reporter in Fight; Executive Haled to Court Over 'Kidnaped' Witnesses

International News Service.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 8.—Tense excitement prevailed here today on the eve of the Louisiana Democratic primary, as the state's most fiery politicalcampaign drew to a close.

Unconfirmed reports were that the National Guard will be held in readiness tomorrow to quell the disorders which observers believe will be an inevitable consequence of the bitter feeling engendered.

A sensation was created here this morning when William G. Weigand, a newspaper reporter punched Gov. Huey P. Long on the nose during an argument in the lobby of a leading downtown hotel. The reporter, held prisoner by the Governor's bodyguard, was released later.

Meanwhile Long, who is opposing Senator Joseph Ransdell for the nomination, appeared in Federal Court to show cause why he should not produce Samuel Irby and James Terrell, missing witnesses in a graft inquiry by the State Highway Department.

These witnesses, it is alleged, were kidnaped Thursday night from a Shreveport hotel by officers of the Governor, and their present whereabouts is not known. Several other state officials are to appear in court with the 27-year-old chief executive.

Irby and Terrell have been kept in seclusion since Thursday, when they had planned to file suit against the governor charging slander.

The governor was accompanied to court by a guard of State Highway Police. Irby was reported to be in the Federal Building at the time.

As the governor and his party started into the building press photographers tried to take pictures, but the guards held their cameras.

DONOHOE DEATH SHELLS LINKED WITH BELL

Ballistics Expert Holds Cartridges Found in Chest Match Those Found in Car

By AL GOUGH.
Staff Correspondent.

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Sept. 8.—Identifying two cartridges taken from a cedar chest belonging to former County Detective Anthony W. (Tony) Bell as identical with two of the four empty shells found in Constable John F. Donohoe's death car, Merton A. Robinson, New Haven ballistics expert, this morning offered the most damaging evidence yet produced by the commonwealth against Bell, on trial for the murder of the constable.

Of the 12 bullets found in Donohoe's body, seven were of .45 caliber and five of .32 caliber, according to previous testimony. Four empty .45 caliber shells were found in the car and five .45 caliber bullets were recovered. Of the four empty shells found in the car, all were of different manufacture, Robinson testified.

Four of the bullets taken from Donohue's body were identified as government issue. They were fired from a .45 Colt automatic, the expert testified. One bullet was identified as having been manufactured for commercial use. Three .32 caliber lead bullets were identified as Smith and Wesson manufacture and a fourth was so battered and distorted that it was beyond identification, Robinson testified.

Of the .45 calibre bullets the expert declared it was his opinion that all were fired from the same weapon.

BELL ALERT

Throughout the expert's testimony, Bell, occupying a seat at his counsel table, leaned forward, intent upon every word. There was no longer a smile of content upon his face.

The nine men and three women in the jury box displayed their interest in Robinson's testimony.

County Detective A. A. Downing preceded Robinson on the stand. He was recalled to testify to the finding of the bullets in Bell's cedar chest at the home of Helen Hess.

With the threat of a jail sentence for contempt to jog her memory, Mrs. Helen Hess, reputed "queen of Fayette County's underworld," is likely to be recalled by the commonwealth in the trial.

Mrs. Hess, who admitted Saturday her friendship with both Bell and Donohoe, was a bit hazy as to when she first met the defendant and "couldn't remember" when she had seen him last prior to the discovery of Donohoe's bullet-riddled body.

CALL WORKHOUSE GUARD

The trial was delayed this morning by routine business of the court sitting en banc, with Judge Thomas H. Hudson presiding. Four young attorneys were admitted to practice before the Fayette County bar, one man was sentenced in a liquor case and other matters requiring the attention of a full bench were disposed of in the presence of the defendant, Bell, and the jury of nine men and three women.

Stanley Mangus, guard at the Allegheny County Workhouse, was the first witness called. Because of the illness of children at home, Special Prosecutor Jones asked permission to deviate in the presentation of the commonwealth's case and call Mangus to prove certain samples of Bell's handwriting made while Bell was an inmate of the workhouse. The commonwealth hopes, by the comparison of handwriting contained in reports made by Bell, to prove that the defendant sent certain threatening letters to a Uniontown banker, close friend of Donohoe, following the constable's killing. Mangus identified three specimens of handwriting which were admitted to evidence.

Lord Castlerosse

Most Talked of Journalist in England

Now in America

Lord Castlerosse, editorial columnist of the London Daily Express, one of the foremost commentators of the London Press, has been induced to write a series of articles on his observations of life in America for the Sun-Telegraph and several other American newspapers. Lord Castlerosse is the son of the Earl of Kenmare, owner of the Lakes of Killarney. He is a director of three great London newspapers.

By LORD CASTLEROSSE.

Maybe just to introduce myself, you had better come along with the reporters when they board the Majestic at Quarantine.

Now I can look a reporter straight in the eye with the knowledge that we both belong to the same trade.

Once upon a time things were different. The first reporter I ever met on this side asked me what business I was in.

"In trouble, of course," I replied, and then went on to explain that I was a stock broker, which was true, too. Then he asked me what I thought of American women, which was complimentary, because, if any man can form and enunciate an opinion, he surely is smart.

AGAINST ASSASSINATION

Your government takes precautions against us. For instance, I had to state that I was against the immediate assassination of the President before they would even vise my passport.

I explained that I was not a really keen politician, and that, during the last general election, I had not voted. As that was not enough, I had to sign a definite "No," and I did.

Your government also asked me if I was a polygamist. Now, surely, that is carrying things a bit far these days.

Don't the officials know what happened to the market during the last few months? Are there still men who can afford to contemplate polygamy?

Still, the age of miracles is not yet over. Even Mr. Mencken has taken the first step to polygamy, so I realize that the government is not so foolish after all.

WOMEN AND THE RITZ

I lunched on arrival with an editor at the Ritz-Carlton and next to us sat a most beautiful lady. I asked who she was and was told that she was a movie star and that her name was Miss Claire Windsor. Unfortunately at that, the star moved, but I saw enough of her to wonder whether there wasn't something in polygamy after all.

After that I looked around at the other ladies and came to the conclusion that any man who lives in New York and is not a polygamist is either a weakling, unambitious, or simply a naturally faithful, morally perfect husband, like you and me.

Nevertheless, as I sat at my modest table at the Ritz-Carlton, and all the tables there are modest, for they are covered with cloths, I saw American husbands pass like ships in the night.

ALIMONY "ALL THE MONEY"

In 1775 American men started a war of independence and, poor mutts, they thought they had won. Idiotic fools, little did they know that what George III, King of England, had failed to do, their wives would succeed in.

There is no independence in the United States. Husbands here are bound to their wives by the sacred bonds of alimony, spelt in many cases "all the money."

Foreigners, dukes, counts and no accounts used to come to America and marry your girls. There was an idea in Europe that all American girls are rich. The market today, though, is not what it was.

ADVICE TO THE LOVE-RICH

Now, I'll give both sides some advice. American girls should make the closest investigation before marriage.

The terrible instance of a young Scottish Earl occurs to my mind. He was handsome and charming. He hinted vaguely at castles and estates. A girl who not only belonged to one of the best New York families but, besides, possessed bonds in the New York Central Railroad, calculated to bring in an income of nearly $100,000, married him.

When she arrived back with her husband in Scotland the very worst prophesies were fulfilled. Her husband turned out to be immensely rich. He owns vast estates. The $100,000 per annum turned out to be a drop in the ocean compared to his wealth.

HUSBAND AND FRIENDS

This unfortunate girl has never been able to dominate her husband. Naturally she resents being swamped in this morass of money and has made a considerable number of secret friends. But she rightly remarks that many girls of her fortune have been able to afford four or five husbands.

As to foreign noblemen who wish to marry rich American girls, my advice is, Don't.

It is not that I have an objection to marrying rich girls; in fact, if my present wife had been rich, I'd have married her just the same; the only thing is that she probably would not have married me—as it was, I had to ask her twice.

Noblemen that wish to live at the expense of rich American girls should never marry them.

For one thing, they seldom touch any money. Other men despise them, and eventually they get divorced in favor of some dark-haired young man with a weak toe and a yearning soul and a South American origin.

RESPECTED ENGLISH BUTLER

Now there is only one class of men who are respected and feared by American women. They are called English butlers.

They earn immense pay, considering that no English butler ever does any work. Besides the actual salary, every self-respecting English butler has a lucrative and desirable acquaintance with the bootlegging world.

Believe me, British butlers have done more to make America unsafe for democracy than Mussolini ever did in Italy.

THE CASE OF A LORD

A lord chancellor of England, called Lord Saint Leonards, once married his cook. Most people would naturally consider this a wise step because good cooks have always been rare.

Alas, though, the moment the kitchen maid became Lady St. Leonards, she gave up cooking, with the result that Lord St. Leonards became worse tempered than ever.

I propose to discuss another subject tomorrow.

MAINE LEADS 10 STATES TO POLLS

Primaries This Week to Pick Party Candidates for Senate, House, Governor

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—(AP.)—Ten states will choose party candidates for the Senate, House or state offices this week, led by the election today in Maine, only inter-party contest before November.

Maine voters choose for senator between Wallace H. White, former Republican representative, and Frank H. Haskell, the Democratic choice. After this week only three states will have to select party nominees — Massachusetts, New York and Wisconsin.

Maryland has no senatorial election this year, and in the primaries today the candidates for governor are unopposed. Albert C. Ritchie is to obtain the Democratic nomination to succeed himself, while Mayor William F. Broening, of Baltimore, receives the Republican right to oppose him in November.

RUN-OFF TUESDAY

In South Carolina Tuesday a Democratic run-off primary is to decide between Senator Cole L. Blease and James F. Byrnes, and between Irba C. Blackwood and Olin D. Johnston, both of Spartanburg, for the governorship.

On the same day Louisiana Democrats will settle the contest between the veteran Senator Ransdell, and Gov. Huey P. Long.

A successor to Senator Lawrence C. Phipps is to be chosen Tuesday by Colorado Republicans. William V. Hodges, bearing the support of the retiring Phipps, is opposed by George Shaw.

At the same time in Michigan Senator James Couzens will be opposed by former Gov. Chase S. Osborn. The Democratic Thomas E. A. Weadock, is unopposed.

GEORGIA VOTES WEDNESDAY

Neither Senator Keyes nor Representative Fletcher Hale and Edward H. Watson are opposed in New Hampshire for the Republican renomination but Democrats will choose between Albert W. Noone and Amos N. Blandin to oppose Keyes.

No Senate contests occur in the remainder of Tuesday's primaries which are in Vermont, Arizona and Washington. The Republicans of Vermont have three candidates for governor, W. Arthur Simpson, Stanley C. Wilson and John W. Gordon.

Wednesday's only primary will be in Georgia where Senator William J. Harris is opposed for Democratic renomination by former Gov. John M. Slaton.

DREW TO HEAR METER SUIT

Judge James B. Drew today held a hearing in the suit of Edward E. Pearlman, taxpayer, to enjoin the City of Pittsburgh from awarding a $27,996 water meter contract to the Pittsburgh Equitable Meter Company.

The plaintiff asked for a preliminary injunction on the ground the Neptune Company of New Jersey had submitted a lower bid, $26,062.

The city brought out that the water bureau desires to install one make of meter, to facilitate repairs and as a measure of economy. City attorneys contended the Neptune company had refused to bid on repairs. The Equitable company has 25,000 meters in use here as against 250 by the Neptune company, the city set forth.

College Teacher's Body Found, Suicide

GREELEY, Col., Sept. 8.—(AP.)—The body of Miss Alice Johnson, 40, member of the faculty of the Colorado State Teachers College, missing since Friday, was found yesterday with a bullet wound in the head, in the Jackson Field stadium.

A .32 caliber pistol was found beside the body. The coroner said all evidence pointed to suicide.

W. Va. Communists Name Jacovides

WHEELING, W. Va., Sept. 8.—(AP.)—The Communist party of West Virginia, in annual convention here, nominated Manuel Jacovides, Wheeling, for United States Senate, and Andrew Mytyzik, Wheeling, for Congress in the First District. No candidates were named in the other congressional districts. Two hundred delegates, representing 14 organizations, were present.

POPE RECEIVES KIN OF DUCE

VATICAN CITY, Sept. 8.—(AP.)—The Pope today accorded a farewell audience to Count Galeazzo Ciano, husband of Premier Mussolini's daughter, who will retire presently as secretary of the Italian embassy to the Holy See to become consul general at Shanghai. The countess also was received by the Pope. Before her marriage she was Edda Mussolini.

The Pontiff chatted amiably with the Count and Countess for more than 20 minutes, asking about their respective families, and sending them his best wishes. He presented to each of his callers a handsomely bound volume of Thomas a' Kempis' "Imitation of Christ," autographed by the Pope.

The Cianos afterward visited Cardinal Pacelli, papal secretary of state. They leave tomorrow for Brindisi, whence they sail for Shanghai.

3 Men Draw Fines On Charges of Girls

Alleged to have molested girls downtown, Samuel Saliemi, of 1745 Bedford avenue, was fined $5 by Magistrate Leo Rothenberg in Central Police Court today.

Bernard Auber, 24, of 244 East Jefferson street, and Paul McDonough, 23, of 1941 West North avenue, arrested by Patrolman Cyril Letzkus when they are said to have accosted a girl at Tenth street and Duquesne way, drew like fines. In addition Auber, said to have been intoxicated, was held for Traffic Court.

ONE BIG BANKER says we have been wallowing in a wave of pessimism, and it soon will pass.

Wall Street hoped so last Saturday, when it managed to work up what is called "a boiling market," selling more than 1,400,000 shares of stock in two hours.

ONE THING is certain, prosperity will come back, eventually bigger than ever, for we have everything in the world that makes prosperity.

And many things are selling now far below their true values, which will be realized later, with some bitterness.

On the other hand, other things are selling for more than they are worth, kept alive by Wall street oxygen.

SO DON'T GAMBLE, or if you must gamble, listen to tips and do exactly the opposite, as a friend of the late Levy Mayer did.

He persuaded Mayer to get him a deeply confidential tip from the late Dan Reid. Dan Reid, with the best intentions, of course, said:

"Sell your watch chain and cuff buttons, and buy so and so."

Levy Mayer's inquiring friend SOLD so and so, through a broker recommended by Albert Lasker, and made money.

KLINE PLANS TO RETIRE

ciding on that. He said he would be guided by what Director Clark and Supt. Walsh advised him.

PRAISES HENNESEY

He added:

"You know this Dennis Hennesey, the new inspector? I've never met him, but everybody tells me he's a wonderful fellow. I appointed him simply on the advice of Clark and Walsh."

The Mayor lost two pounds somewhere in Spain, Italy, France or Hungary. He said:

"I'm coming home to take a good rest. We had a very pleasant trip but I'm tired. We spent most of the time motoring. You know, when you get up early in the morning, pack your bags and motor all day you're tired that night. And I'm too old for that.

"I don't know what's been going on in Pittsburgh. All the news we've had has been a cable every now and then from Frank (Frank Swaney, the Mayor's secretary) and letters from my wife's relatives. I didn't want to be bothered with a lot of mail. We were wined and dined wherever we went. In Budapest, they even illuminated the buildings with a special kind of lighting for us."

He was asked:

"Mayor, have you brought back any new ideas about municipal government?"

The Mayor grunted.

GET IDEAS IN U. S.

"Why, they have to come over here to get ideas. They're all having revolutions over there."

"How about the booze business?"

"I've seen more drunks in Pittsburgh or New York than in any place over there."

"And what is the significance of that?"

"Well, you can draw your own conclusion—whether light wines and beer'll hurt a man."

On the same ship with the Mayor were Mrs. Hall, of Hall-Mills fame, and a lady who looked like a countess.

HOME TOMORROW

The Mayor plans to leave New York tonight for Pittsburgh. Today he'll see a few friends here and possibly a show tonight. Mrs. Kline wants to do a bit of shopping. Explaining why she didn't bring back more than "a little bit" of European merchandise, Mrs. Kline said:

"I'm not interested in Paris clothes."

This reporter had a great idea which the Mayor rejected. He wanted Pittsburgh's well-dressed Mayor to meet New York's well-dressed Mayor tomorrow and stage what might readily be interpreted as a contest for the best dressed mayor championship. But Charlie said:

"No, my suits are all packed and full of wrinkles."

Reports from the sale of tickets indicate a record crowd will turn out to welcome Mayor Kline home at a dinner Wednesday night in the William Penn Hotel. City Treasurer Roy D. Schooley, of the dinner committee, said that more than 1,800 reservations had been made and that they were still coming in.

Peru Junta Holds American Builder

LIMA, Peru, Sept. 8.—(AP.)—J. H. Gildred, American manager of the J. H. Gildred Company, an American concern building the new palace of justice and new market buildings, was still detained by agents of the new government today, pending an audit of funds received under former President Leguia's administration.

Gildred was apprehended yesterday when he arrived at Callao aboard the steamer Santa Clara.

Zane Grey's Book No Infringement

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 8.—(AP.)—Federal Judge George Cosgrove has ruled Zane Grey's "The Thundering Herd" did not infringe the copyright of John R. Cook, author of "The Border and the Buffalo," published in 1907. In a $500,000 damage suit brought by Charles A. Maddux, assignee of Cook's widow, it was alleged Grey pirated Cook's story.

Three Panaman Ministers Resign

PANAMA, Sept. 8.—(AP.)—The political atmosphere here was cleared somewhat in the forenoon today by announcement of the resignation of three members of the Cabinet, Interior Secretary Robles, Finance Secretary Duque and the Forein Affairs Minister, Arosemena.

BUS PASSENGER, SICK, ROBBED

A purse of $50 raised among sympathetic fellow travelers enabled an ill man, Camillo Varsite, 42, of Sturgeon, Pa., to continue his trip to a Michigan sanitarium, after he had been robbed of all his savings, amounting to $130, and personal effects in the Greyhound bus station, Liberty avenue and Grant street, yesterday.

Shortly after a woman had jostled him, Varsite discovered he had been robbed. His cousin, Mrs. M. J. Puskar, who had accompanied him to the station with several friends, raised the purse among bus riders in the depot.

Varsite was talking to his friends when the woman jostled him, he told police. He thought nothing of the incident until he reached into his pocket and discovered his money gone.

Jewelry Salesman Found Dead in Hotel

NEW CASTLE, Pa., Sept. 8.—(AP.)—Phillip H. Winterberg, about 55, traveling salesman for a jewelry firm, was found dead in a local hotel room. Death was due to natural causes. He was believed to have been from Chicago.

Famous Theater Soon to House Tiny Golf

CHICAGO, Sept. 8.—(AP.)—Shades of Patti, Melba and Caruso! The Auditorium Theater, long the aristocratic home of opera and the better things of cultural life, is being turned into a miniature golf course.

Opera never was a paying proposition. The Auditorium now is in the hands of a receiver. Bonds for $834,000, issued 40 years ago, are understood to be due and payable.

Miniature golf may be the answer, the receiver, R. Floyd Clinch, believes.

charged with tenseness, yet calm prevailed. Cadets and troops returned to their barracks from the fighting in front of Government House and the newspaper La Epoca.

LEADERS ROUNDED UP

As Gen. Uriburu's government moved to entrench itself firmly various members of the old regime were arrested. These included the former minister of interior, Elpidio Gonzales, the former minister of foreign affairs, Horacio Oyahanote, the former Irigoyen senator, Louis Molinari; the former director of the mails, Ammallo; the former director of railroads, Claps; the former chief of traffic police, Sturla; the old friend of President Irigoyen's, Scarlato, and the former Irigoyen deputy, Bidegeian. The three last named are accused of directing the "klan radical," a group which was held responsible for the firing from the crowd on the cadets in the Plaza Congreso Saturday.

SEEK WALKER'S EWALD FILE

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—(INS.)—Mayor James J. Walker was called upon today by Thomas Penney, Jr., aide to Attorney General Hamilton Ward, to turn over to his office all letters pertaining to the appointment of George F. Ewald, former magistrate.

The Ewald case is the latest of New York's City's judgeships scandals. Ewald is alleged to have bought his appointment to the bench three years ago for $10,000. The local district attorney's probe of the scandal was superseded through the action of Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt in supplanting District Attorney Thomas C. T. Grain by Attorney General Ward.

Coincident with this development, Samuel Seabury, former judge of the Court of Appeals, inaugurated his investigation into the magistrates and magistrates courts of New York City.

New Seneca Trail Opened for Traffic

CLARKSBURG, W. Va., Sept. 8.—Seneca trail, state highway No. 24, one of the most beautiful drives in West Virginia, has been rebuilt and opened to traffic from Lewisburg by way of Marlinton, Elkins and Parsons to Red House, Md., connecting with the Northwestern turnpike and Midland trail.

4 Fisherman Drown As Boat Capsizes

TILLAMOOK, Ore., Sept. 8.—(AP.)—Four men were drowned yesterday at the mouth of Big Nestucca River, near Pacific City, when the motorboat from which they were fishing capsized.

Virulent Partisanship Opposed by Coolidge

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., Sept. 8.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

Up to the present time there has been very little development of a national character in the political campaign. Apparently local issues are engaging most of the public attention. That is inevitable where the candidates are dependent upon state and district favor for their election.

Calvin Coolidge

There has been some complaint on one side that the President has been over-praised and on the other side that he has been over-criticized. Supposing both were true, it discloses nothing more than a normal condition of political activity which is not likely to arouse much public interest.

All elections are important and good government can be secured only by the constantly active and energetic efforts of the voters. But the country ought not to be subjected at the present time to agitation over false issues. A candid, conscientious, good-tempered discussion of public policies is always welcome. But during the next two months the people may well be spared from the virulent type of partisanship and personal abuse.

CALVIN COOLIDGE.

This is one of a series of daily articles Mr. Coolidge is writing exclusively for the Sun-Telegraph in Pittsburgh.

Vice President Curtis Denies Dry Charge

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—(AP.)—Vice President Curtis has emphatically denied a statement made by Maurice Campbell, former prohibition administrator at New York, in an article published here that he had used his influence in causing alcohol permits to be issued.

The reference to Mr. Curtis was contained in the first of a series of syndicated articles dealing with enforcement conditions and written by Campbell.

Charges made by Campbell also provoked a rejoinder today from Seymour Lowman, assistant secretary of the treasury. Campbell said Lowman had ordered him to relax brewery supervision in New York City during the 1928 campaign. Lowman said:

"I have read Chapter One and would judge that the story is the greatest romance of the century.

"Maj. Campbell was a horse doctor in the Army. The horses died.

"He was a moving picture magnate. The company went bankrupt.

"As prohibition administrator he failed to dry up New York. He had a free hand.

"As an author, his imagination beats that of Dante. I have nothing further to say now."

HOOVER WELCOMES FRENCH FLIERS AT CAPITAL FETE

COULDN'T PAY $3.50!

FRANCES WHITE . . . JAILED FIVE HOURS FOR TAXI BILL

FRANCES WHITE JAILED, BROKE

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—(AP.)—Frances White, not so long ago the favorite of Broadway musical comedy and once one of the highest-paid actresses on the stage, yesterday received a suspended sentence in West Side Court when she admitted she was unable to pay a $3.50 taxicab bill immediately.

Miss White had been locked up for five hours after a cab driver turned her over to the police. Court attendants were leading her away to take her fingerprints when Magistrate Jean Norris learned who she was and called her back. The actress asked three days in which to raise the money, and it was granted.

She appeared in such shows as "The Follies," "The Midnight Frolic," Hitchy-Koo," "Jimmy" and "The Hotel Mouse."

S. W. STRAUS, BANKER, DIES

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—(United Press.)—Simon William Straus, banker, philanthropist and lifelong exponent of thrift, died yesterday in his suite at the Ambassador Hotel.

At his bedside when he died were Mrs. Straus, the former Miss Hattie Klee, of Pittsburgh, whom he married in 1893; their three daughters, Straus' brother, S. J. T. Straus, and the attending physician, Dr. Milton B. Rosenbluth.

Straus was chairman of the board of S. W. Straus & Co., one of the largest investment banking houses in the country, with principal offices in New York and Chicago and branches in every large city throughout the country.

'Amundsen Hunt Ship Will Go North Again

ARCHANGEL — (AP.) — The schooner Belukha, which aided in the search for Amundsen in 1928, is to make another polar expedition under Soviet auspices. The ship will take the northern route to the Lena River estuary, carrying meteorologists to the Taimyr peninsula to make observations.

Bored by Beauties, They Crown Filly

CAGLIARI, Sardinia, Italy — (AP.)—So weary did the young set at the Nebida beach become of bathing beauty contests that they entered a filly from a nearby stable and had her acclaimed "queen of the sea."

Air Too Light, Pens Spill Their Ink

BOGOTA. — (AP.) — Chemists have been forced to develop a new fountain pen ink for this mountain city. At an altitude of a mile and a half, visitors have been annoyed to find the ink in their pens spills into their pockets. The atmosphere lacks sufficient pressure to keep the ink in the barrel.

Vatican Curbs Rites Of Chinese Converts

VATICAN CITY—(AP.)—Warning that no rites of the ancient Chinese religion, such as ancestor worship, may be retained by Chinese converts has been issued.

JURORS WARNED AGAINST FIXING

A warning against jury fixing was issued today to the new jurors in Common Pleas Court by Presiding Judge Frank P. Patterson.

Included in the jurist's instruction to the talesmen was this statement:

"If any person should be so low, brazen or vile as to tell you or suggest to you what the verdict in any case should be, it is your duty to convey that information to the court, so as to enable the court to take proper action."

For the first time in many years, the eight courtrooms in Common Pleas Court were in use today.

Black Again Rules As 1st Auto Shade

DETROIT.—(AP.)—Black rules as the favorite automobile color.

The six main color families have been ranked in a survey as black, blue, brown, green, maroon and gray, black holding the popularity for the first time since the introduction of lacquer finishes in place of paint and varnish.

Thirteen months ago black was listed next to the last. Its rise to the top was made largely at the expense of blue.

Belgium Joyous at Birth Of Heir to Throne

BRUSSELS, Sept. 8.—(AP.)—Belgium rejoiced today in the birth of a new prince of the blood and heir in the direct male line to the throne.

Princess Astrid, of Sweden, wife of Crown Prince Leopold, bearing her second child yesterday, gave the country a nine-pound boy. The newcomer was baptized last night with the name Badouin Albert Axel Marie Gustave.

The preliminary baptismal service will be followed by a formal ceremony within a month, at which King Albert will act as godfather. The first child of the royal pair, born in 1927, is Princess Josephine Charlotte.

The boy was born at Stuyvenberg Castle, around which barbed wire had been stretched to keep away the curious. With the booming of a salute of 101 guns announcing birth of a boy and heir, a crowd surrounded the castle to cheer the prince and his family.

Princess Astrid is 25 years old. She is the first daughter of Prince Charles, of Sweden, brother of the Swedish King, and of Princess Ingeborg. She and Leopold were married November 4, 1926.

HURRICANE ZONE FACES FLOODS

Heavy Rain in Santo Domingo Hinders Relief Work; Planes Bring Supplies

PORT AU PRINCE, Haiti, Sept. 8.—(AP.)—Heavy rains lasting more than 24 hours have swollen the Ozama River and made travel through the hurricane zone in the interior of Santo Domingo all but impossible today. The Ozama's flow has increased to 15 miles an hour, effectually preventing boats from entering its mouth.

Airplanes today formed virtually the only mode of travel into the area where last week about 4,000 persons lost their lives and far more than that number received injuries. Relief work went forward today as energetically as possible under such cicumstances.

Aviation reconnaissance has shown that the hurricane, after razing Santo Domingo City, traveled west, destroying everything in its path in an area 25 to 40 miles wide for a distance of about 50 miles. When the hurricane hit the side of the mountains, rising almost perpendicularly in its path, the storm actually skinned the south slope of the mountain range there and hurtled into the air, touching only the high points in the succeeding ranges upon its course to the sea.

RICH VALLEYS ESCAPE

The area of the Santiago, Vega and Boca valleys, which are the productive part of the country, were spared.

Plantations east of Santiago were wiped out for a distance of 15 to 20 miles.

Relief work organized in Santiago, the metropolis of Northern Santo Domingo, today was greatly hampered by the condition of roads and rivers. The forwarding of food to the stricken areas was almost tied up. Relief work at Santo Domingo City, according to Col. R. M. Cutts, senior American officer at Haiti, in charge of the air transport service, was progressing as fast as adverse conditions would allow.

HIGH WATER FEARED

Yesterday's rain destroyed all hope that the flood would subside within a week or 10 days and it was admitted frankly today that the situation was grave. Boats, in order to enter the harbor, had to develop a speed of more than 15 miles an hour, in order to combat the current. Small boats were seen attempting to land provisions at the foot of a 50-foot cliff near which lies the hulk of the old United States ship Memphis, thrown ashore by a tidal wave in August, 1916.

Col. Cutts, because of his long experience in Santo Domingo as head of the Dominican guard, was enabled to speed up the service somewhat. Commander Johnson, of the medical corps, has been operating tirelessly. He performed 51 amputations the first night he reached Santo Domingo.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—(AP.)—The Navy Department announced today that a destroyer would be sent to Santo Domingo with medical and relief supplies to aid hurricane victims.

MINISTER SEES ANTI-DRY ROUT

That any anti-dry who runs for a high office can expect nothing but defeat was the declaration of the Rev. Dr. William M. Woodfin, pastor of the Third United Presbyterian Church, in his sermon at the Carnegie Music Hall last night.

Dr. Woodfin spoke at the final meeting of the season of community services, in which 26 churches of Bellefield, Oakland, Shadyside and Squirrel Hill joined.

"The fight today against prohibition is supported by people who are fighting for respectability for an outlawed traffic. The counter attack is a vigorous one. A wet press is hurling its poisonous gas throughout the nation.

"The challenge comes to the church of the living God: 'Stand your ground; your cause is right.' We must again take the offensive and we must do it in the consciousness that God is with us."

Polo Draws Society From Yacht Races

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 8.—(AP.)—Polo appeals to society more than yachting. The coming international races are insufficient attraction to prolong the season. Many summer residences were closed before Saturday's polo game on Long Island, and others will close this week.

QUAKES TERRIFY ITALIAN TOWNS

CANDELA, Foggia, Italy, Sept. 8.—(AP.)—A strong earth shock, of six seconds duration, was felt a few minutes before midnight. It was preceded by loud rumblings, which terrorized the people.

No damage was caused, but houses weakened by the July quake were endangered anew.

A shock, accompanied by rumblings, was felt at Rionero Friday night. There was no damage but the people, fearful of a catastrophe, spent the night outdoors.

TOLMEZZO, Italy, Sept. 8. —(AP.)—An earthquake shock, preceded by rumblings, was felt yesterday. There was no damage but panic ensued here and in nearby villages.

Jazz Aids Students, College Test Shows

ST. PAUL.—(AP.)—Students in college study better when listening to jazz music on the radio.

This is the conclusion of tests completed at the University of Minnesota in co-operation with KSTP. Two sophomores, James Copeland and Robert McBrady, conducting experiments in psychology with varied groups, reported they found students accomplished more and were less distracted when music was pouring from the loudspeaker.

Girl Who Let Train Sever Right Arm Defends Act

SALINAS, Cal., Sept. 8.—(INS.)—Firm in her conviction she had done right when she placed her right arm on a railroad track so a train could sever it, Alta Fickle, 20, was recovering in a hospital today from the effects of her act. The arm was amputated just above the elbow. She explained:

"My right arm always wanted to murder someone, so I followed the Biblical command and had it cut off. I'm surprised that people should question a simple act."

2 IN LOVE BANK CASE ON TRIAL

CHICAGO, Sept. 8.—(INS.)—Elmer Langguth, president of the now defunct State Bank of Maywood, together with his pretty cashier, Laverne Lindgren, were scheduled to go to trial today on charges of conspiracy.

Indictments now pending charge the pair with manipulations of the bank's funds which purportedly netted them $173,000. This sum, according to authorities, was used by the couple in the course of their alleged love affair during which Miss Lindgren rose from a stenographer to bank cashier.

4 GIRLS LINKED IN DEATH QUIZ

CHICAGO, Sept. 8.—(INS.)—Watson W. Moore, former New York accountant, was to be arraigned here today on the charge of having murdered his wife. He has admitted to police that he advised her to poison herself.

Meanwhile four young women, three of them "taxi" dancers, became important figures in the investigation of Mrs. Moore's sudden death, begun when a small bottle, supposed to have contained cyanide of potassium, was found in a sewing basket in the Moore home.

Police declare all four girls, at one time or another, have been the objects of the husband's infatuations. The girls, whose names temporarily are withheld, were identified through telephone numbers found in the Moore home.

Moore, a patient in a New York state asylum seven years ago, was formally charged with murder Saturday following the first session of the inquest. The hearing was continued to allow time for chemical analysis of the dead woman's organs.

8 MORE GIRLS OFFER TO WED

Eight additional offers of marriage to the man who wants Mayor Charles H. Kline to help him get a wife, were received at the City-County Building today.

Some of the applicants, in their letters, inclosed photographs and requested they be forwarded to R. O. Klinger, County Hospital, Harrisburg, who made the unusual request for the executive's services as a marriage broker. All described themselves "beautiful, good cooks, willing to settle down, and be happy helpmates."

So far, 16 offers have been received since Klinger asked the Mayor last week to aid in finding a mate.

45 More Steamboat Inspectors Named

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—(AP.)—Forty-five additional assistants and inspectors have been added to the Commerce Department's steamboat inspection service to permit a more thorough examination of vessels.

Dickerson N. Hoover, supervising inspector general, said the increased personnel would permit three re-inspections of a class of vessels which formerly received only one annual inspection. This will apply to all American and foreign passenger vessels. The additional employes will include one assigned to Pittsburgh.

Salvationists Will Exchange Stations

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., Sept. 8. (AP.)—Announcement was made here that Ensign and Mrs. Goner Thomas, who have been in charge of Salvation Army work here since June, 1929, had been transferred to Parkersburg, effective September 17. Field Major and Mrs. John May, of Parkersburg, will be transferred to Huntington.

Fire of undetermined origin destroyed a two-story frame dwelling at 610 Cycle street early today, causing damage of $3,000 according to a police report. The house was unoccupied.

PRISONER SLAIN IN GEORGIA JAIL

DARIEN, Ga., Sept. 8.—(AP.)—John Tandell, 30-year-old Negro, suspected of taking part in shootings today that caused the death of one officer and injuries to three other men, was shot to death in the McIntosh County jail soon after he had been captured.

Sheriff Poppell was unable to explain how Tandell was killed. Soon after he had been locked in a cell jailers found him shot to death.

OFFICER'S SLAYER DIES

ALEXANDRIA, Va., Sept. 8.—(INS.)—Owen Wroten, Negro, Denmark, S. C., who killed Patrolman A. Perry Pierce yesterday in a gun battle, died early today. Pierce attempted to arrest the Negro when he was about to stage a holdup, police said.

SHAKERS STILL AT HAND GRIPS

Still gripping each other's hands, after more than 132 hours, West End's long-distance hand shakers today were as confident as ever of attaining their goal of 500 continuous hours.

One of the shakers, Charles Mathews, developed a painful case of neuralgia over the week-end, but has carried on in spite of that handicap. He planned to seek relief in the dentist's chair today, accompanied, of course, by his partner, Joseph Cue.

The young men are still following the original rules of the contest, which call for only 10-minute rest periods each hour, their movements being constantly checked by managers and a group of witnesses.

Small Car Cramps Chief; He Gets Driver

NORTH PELHAM, N. Y., Sept. 8.—(AP.)—A small automobile is utterly unsuited for Michael J. Fitzpatrick, chief of police, who is a big fellow. He told the village trustees so, exhibiting a buttonless coat, a damaged watch chain and other evidence of being cramped behind the wheel. The trustees gave him a vacation and authorized him to designate a little cop as his chauffeur.

Pastors Assigned By German M. E.'s

BUCYRUS, O., Sept. 8.—(AP.)—Pastoral assignments made at the closing session of the sixty-seventh annual German Methodist Episcopal Church conference included: North Braddock, Pa., the Rev. John F. Linke; Pittsburgh, First Church, the Rev. Joseph Lamy; Pittsburgh, Ohio Street, the Rev. William Weiler; Wheeling, the Rev. E. J. Pfeifer.

COSTE, MATE HONOR U. S. UNKNOWN

President Links Latest Air Triumph With Byrd and Rickenbacker Exploits

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—Those two sturdy sons of France, Capt. Dieudonne Coste and Maurice Bellonte, whose successful flight westward over the Atlantic has captured the public's imagination more than any flight since Lindbergh's hop were the honored guests of the nation, today, at the capital.

HOOVER'S SPEECH

President Hoover in welcoming them said:

"It gives me great pleasure to welcome you here today. Every American recalls the 30 hours and more of intense emotion that gripped us while our own Colonel Lindbergh was winging his way to Paris, and the sense of relief and joy that swept over the nation when word came he had safely landed. Our pride and happiness were redoubled when we heard of the magnificent reception given to him by the government and people of France. Our hearts went out in fraternal warmth to those who had so royally welcomed our national hero.

"Today, therefore, every American knows exactly what pride and happiness possesses every French heart, at the knowledge that these two gallant sons of France stand safely on our soil. We wish the people of France to know that our welcome of their two heroes is warm and spontaneous and universal. We rejoice that this brilliant feat has been accomplished. We are delighted to honor these two men who have thuse dramatically paid Col. Lindbergh's call.

"This return visit of French aviators is even more than an occasion for national rejoicing and international felicitations. What they have done, what the great American aviators have done, Byrd, Rickenbacker, and the rest, both those who sacrificed themselves wholly and those who live, is a glory of the whole human race."

LINDY GRETS FLIERS

Lindbergh greeted the fliers at the commerce department along with Secretary Lamont and Assistant Secretary Young. He said:

"Good morning, glad to see you."

Coste, beaming, replied in English:

"How are you?"

Young asked the aviators whether they would tell anything of their plans for a good-will flight over parious states and was told:

"Nothing yet."

WREATH ON TOMB

A quiet moment of reverence was spent at the tomb of the unknown soldier by Coste and Bellnte before the state luncheon at the White House. Their wreath of tribute was laid at Arlington while an Army bugler sounded taps. The Army band had played the Marseillaise while the airmen walked through the memorial ampitheater to the tomb. They saw the dome of the Capitol and the Washington monument through the mist in the distance.

MEMORABLE GREETING

On their arrival at Bolling Field yesterday, swooping down from storm-threatening clouds, the two Frenchmen were accorded a reception surpassed only by that accorded Lindbergh after his memorable flight to Paris.

George Akerson, on behalf of the President, greeted the fliers and extended Mr. Hoover's felicitations, while 12,000 citizens cheered. The welcome was one of spontaneous enthusiasm. The Army Band struck up the French national anthem as the scarlet and silver plane headed into the gentle breeze to make a perfect landing.

Auto Kills Woman And Boy on Road

ALTOONA, Pa., Sept. 8.—(AP.)—Mrs. Ella May Kyle, 48, and her stepson, William Kyle, Jr., 13, of Lakemont, were killed late Saturday when struck by an automobile while they were walking along the highway. George Brenner, 52, the driver of the automobile, was released pending a coroner's inquest.

Note Washed Up Hints Fate Of Ship Crew Long Ago

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—(AP.)—A message given up by the seas Saturday at St. Petersburg, Fla., may be a clue in the 29-year-old mystery as to the fate of the crew of the Commodore of Philadelphia.

The message, contained in a rusted tin can, which fell apart when handled, read:

"March 21, 1899.

"Send help at once. Our ship, the Commodore, was wrecked two weeks ago. Send help at once. Longitude 83, latitude 91.

"GEORGE EVERETT."

The Commodore of Philadelphia was a mystery ship.

On April 6, 1901, a two-masted 30-foot rigger drifted into Brooklyn Harbor on the tide. When the schooner struck a wharf, workmen boarded her, expecting to find her crew had been killed by pirates.

No sign of life was found and there was no evidence of a struggle.

The ship bore the name Commodore of Philadelphia. Officials were never able to find the owners.

Strange tales gained circulation. One was that the schooner braved a storm off New Jersey and was whipped about by wind and swell for eight days, her crew being washed overboard save for one who escaped to tell the tale. The identity of the survivor was as mysterious as the craft itself.

New Andree Discoveries Stir World

clusively whether it was possible that these [illegible] finds could have been relics of Andree's expedition.

Latest Discoveries May Solve Mystery

By KNUT STUBBENDORFF

(From the [illegible] Universal Service newspaper [illegible] which on Thursday reached [illegible] Island death place of Salomon [illegible] Andree and his two comrades, sent a [illegible] for further Andree relics.)

ABOARD [illegible] SS ISBJOERN ANCHORED [illegible] OFF WHITE ISLAND [illegible] Sept. 8.—Continuing [illegible] investigation of Andree's encampment we discovered a second [illegible] and the upper part of the skull uncovered previously.

These finds [illegible] were brought to light only after we had chopped for hours at the ice and snow that for 33 years had held them secret.

The body we believe to be that of Knut Fraenkel, third member of Andree's balloon expedition to the North Pole. The body fingers bent in under and behind the skull indicate that he met death in some tragic and horrible manner. It may be that he froze to death.

It is our opinion that the first skull uncovered with a number of other relics is that of Andree and that the second is Fraenkel's.

FATE SEEMS CLEAR

The fate of the Andree expedition now seems clear. There is no doubt in our minds that all three men made White Island in safety and there perished, frozen to death or by some other calamity.

We had to hew our way through huge blocks of ice to make our discoveries. As mentioned in my previous dispatch, we could trace the signs of the well-ordered camp that the three men had established on these barren shores after their balloon was forced down. It is our opinion that the accident ending their flight occurred somewhere in the vicinity of, if not over, White Island.

We therefore planned our investigation so we could examine carefully the remains of the hut just found.

DAY CLEAR AND SUNNY

It was the first clear, sunny day for several months and the sea was quite calm. We went ashore in small boats, about 10 o'clock in the morning.

Through clumps of ice we hewed our way to what we saw was a sleeping bag. Near the sleeping bag we came across the second skull. The rough work of chopping and cutting at the ice was immediately halted while we took every precaution to safeguard this precious find.

Digging was then begun at what we thought would be the floor level of the hut. It was then that the ground plan of the hut came to light. It was built up against the cliff—that is, against the north side of the cliff—and was located beneath a heap of stones that Andree evidently had piled on top of the cliff, so that he could trace its location if snows should cover it completely.

CAREFULLY UNCOVERED

The foundation stones of the hut were revealed by cautious and careful clearing away of the ice and snow. We found this rude shelter five paces long and three paces wide. The southern wall was formed by the cliff. The two other walls were built of driftwood. The sleeping bunks were so located that the head of each was under the overhanging cliff.

About in the center of the hut there was a basket buried in the ice. Work of freeing the basket from the iron-like ice was exceedingly difficult, as apparently it had frozen and refrozen many times. It was enveloped in many cakes of ice.

From 11 o'clock until 4, we worked to free it without damaging what it contained. When finally we lifted it clear of its icy foundation, we found the skull and upper portion of the skeleton found previously. We had no doubt but that it was what remained of Fraenkel.

The dead man lay on his left side and wore a cap. Against his face a bottle lay, and two unopened tins of chocolate.

It was quite plain to us that Fraenkel had died while lying in his sleeping bag, inside the hut. Against the back of his head lay untouched portions of the special food which the Andree expedition had stored aboard their balloon before the take-off from Danes Island, Spitsbergen, July 11, 1897.

These portions consisted of two copper tins and an aluminum box containing chocolate. A pair of sun-glasses and a pocket knife were found lying beside the head. In the pocket of the dead man's coat was discovered a lump of twisted paper. Where the hip should have been, there were two notebooks frozen together, one of them well preserved.

Behind the shoulders was found a third document, tied up in thin string. The dead man had brown hair and a beard. There were no signs of scurvy, confirming our previous belief that it was not hunger or disease that killed the three adventurers.

This man, we believe, is Fraenkel. The portion of a skeleton found before, outside the hut, we believe to be the missing lower part of the one discovered inside.

The upper part of the body was frozen hard to the earth. The discovery in the hut made a horrible impression on us, giving, as it did, so grim a picture of how death had reached the man.

STOCKHOLM, Sept. 8.—All Scandinavia and the entire world was stirred by publication of the sensational finds on White Island by the Hearst-Dagenenyheter expedition aboard the Isbjoern.

That the further effort to find additional relics of the Andree polar expedition should have been so quickly successful astonished experts in Arctic explorations.

Noted Scandinavian explorers and geographers, intimately acquainted with Arctic conditions, are unanimous in declaring the expedition one of the most remarkable achievements ever undertaken in Arctic research.

Prof. J. G. Anderson, famous Swedish geographical expert who aided Andree at the start of his fatal expedition, declares that the Hearst-Dagenenyheter finds not only compel all hitherto accepted theories regarding the fate of the Andree party to be radically changed, but says they are certain to unravel the mystery which has been locked up in the frozen heart of Arctic ice for 33 years.

From all parts of Europe, and even the United States, messages were received today, congratulating the expdition.

SUICIDE BLAST WRECKS HOUSE

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa., Sept. 8.—(AP.)—Dr. Raymond J. Bower, a prominent physician of this city, was found dead, a suicide, following a terrific explosion which wrecked his home and rocked houses over a large area.

An investigation conducted by authorities revealed that he had died of gas poisoning after he had closed himself in the kitchen and turned on three gas jets on the stove.

The blast occurred when the gas which had filled the entire house was ignited by a small pilot light which had been left burning on the gas stove.

The victim was alone in the house when the explosion occurred. His wife and three children, who survive him, had left the city for a few days' visit.

Despondency caused by ill health was thought to have been the motive for the suicidal act.

PLANE STUNTER DIES IN CRASH

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 8.—(AP.)—John O. Donaldson, Newark (N. J.) pilot, plunged to his death at the municipal airport here a short time after the two-day race meet, held under the auspices of the American Legion, had come to a close. He died in a hospital less than an hour after his plane crashed, a short distance from the field.

Donaldson and several other fliers went up after the meet had closed officially to entertain the crowd of nearly 100,000 spectators with stunting. He was flying the plane of Mrs. Opal Kuntz, of New York, and was looping when suddenly it went into a tail spin.

The plane crashed a half-mile from the field. Donaldson was unconscious when rescuers reached him, and it was necessary to cut away parts of the fuselage to remove him.

U. S. AND JAPAN NEAR BREAK IN 1918

State Department Reveals How Delicate Situation Over China Was Handled

By WILLIAM S. NEAL
International News Service

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—The curtain was lifted today on a delicate diplomatic situation existing between the United States and Japan in 1918, when Japan was suspected of using the World War to entrench herself in China.

The story is contained in a volume of diplomatic correspondence published by the State Department. In the end, the atmosphere cleared and both nations were disclosed as co-operating to maintain the government of China and to obtain its aid in the war.

The Lansing-Ishii agreement negotiated by Secretary Lansing—defining the attitude of the powers toward China and guaranteeing that her sovereignty would be respected—grew out of the fear of an extension of Japanese power.

SETS FORTH ITS ORIGIN

In a message to the American minister to China, Paul S. Reinsch, January 29, 1928, Lansing said:

"The so-called Lansing-Ishii agreement, relating to the Far East, is intended to define more clearly the attitude of the American and Japanese governments toward the Republic of China and to remove the suspicion and distrust engendered by evil influences, which might ultimately have brought about misunderstandings between the United States and Japan if no steps had been taken to counteract their efforts."

Reinsch had warned the State Department that Japan was seeking to supplant the influence of the other great powers. He reported:

"The Japanese government has chosen this time for an attempt to establish an ascendancy of Japanese influence in Chinese affairs."

WAS MAKING INROADS

Again on October 19, 1918, Reinsch declared Japan was making inroads in China. A military clique in Pekin, he said, sought to make the War Participation Bureau the center of influence on the government. Using Japanese financial support, he said, the clique was debauching the Chinese treasury, taking over control of business and natural resources. He added:

"The Japanese government should understand without delay that the methods and aims of its present action in China are viewed with the severest disapproval."

Japan aroused the Chinese government and American diplomats by substituting a civil administration for a military in the leased territory of Kiaochow, under her control as an ally in the war. The American consul, Willys R. Peck, reported that Chinese officials feared the comparatively trivial military operations against the Germans were to be made the basis of Japanese domination of Shantung.

PASTOR'S CALL STILL PENDING

In his first sermon since his return from his summer vacation in Canada, the Rev. Dr. W. Wofford T. Duncan, pastor of Emory Methodist Episcopal Church, last night spoke in reference to the call extended him by an Indianapolis Church. He said in part:

"The question as to the continuance of the delightful relations which we have enjoyed has been raised during the vacation weeks. The suggestion of an exchange with the Indianapolis pastor and the invitation which accompanied it opened up a very desirable field of labor. This matter is still pending.

"What I want to emphasize is the high gratification which comes to any pastor in the assurance that his church and board are supporting him in the work he is seeking to do. Whatever the future holds for us, the unanimous expression of desire by Emory Board that I remain will ever be an inspiration to me. While I have had a similar expression in every charge I have served and would not want to serve a church without it, yet there is something about the Emory call to return which makes it unique.

"It comes after a 10-year pastorate. That is a long period for a Methodist church. It is five years longer than any pastorate which Emory has known in its 98 years of history. That I have been able to reverse the short pastorate custom in Emory is gratifying. I trust that there may be many more pastorates here as long and longer."

Hunter Lost, Dies Of Heart Attack

HAYWARD, Cal., Sept. 8.—(INS.)—A two-day search, engaging 200 men, had ended today with the finding of the body of A. E. Fischer, 67-year-old huntsman, in the Mount Hamilton foothills. Fischer, on a hunting expedition, had become separated from his companions and collapsed from heart failure.

Old Church Takes Names Off Pews

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—(AP.)—St. James Lutheran Church, 103 years old, has abolished nameplates on pews. The purpose is to make strangers feel more at home.

Too Many Birthday Parties Bring $100 Fine

Charles Hoag, 33, rear of 1307 Boyle street, was arraigned in North Side Police Court today, charged with keeping a disorderly house. Police testified they confiscated moonshine and home brew when they raided the place last night, as hilarity ran high.

Hoag told Magistrate Ray Schneider:

"I was celebrating my birthday."

"You said you were celebrating it when you were arrested a short time ago on the same charge."

"No, that was only a party."

Hoag was fined $100 with the alternative of serving 30 days in jail. He paid. Eight male visitors were discharged.

Ex-Aviator Steals Car, Flees Sing Sing

OSSINING, N. Y., Sept. 8.—(AP.)—Using the automobile of a keeper, Walter Mitchell, 31, a trusty and described as the only former aviator in Sing Sing prison, escaped after being released for duty at the pumping plant outside the walls. He was a second offender, serving a seven-year sentence for grand larceny.

NOTED WOMAN ARTIST DIES

STAMFORD, Conn., Sept. 8.—(AP.)—Rhoda Holmes Nicholls, noted artist and inventor of many implements used by water color painters, died at her home yesterday. She was 76 years old.

She was regarded as one of the foremost painters of Venetian subjects in this country and was one of the first artists to paint colors into shadows which gave her work as far back as 1880 the depth and brilliance of modern painting.

She invented the hook stick, a substitute for an easel and developed the process of wetting and stretching water-color paper over wet blotting paper.

For the last 10 years of her life she was an invalid.

Kills Wife and Self, Jealousy Blamed

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 7.—(AP.)—Charles Presto, 40, a barber, shot his wife to death yesterday and then took his own life with the same pistol. Jealousy was said by the police to have been the motive. The couple's two small children, a 5-week-old daughter, and a son, 15 months, were asleep in another room.

Governor to Attend Armory Dedication

GREENSBURG, Pa., Sept. 8.—Gov. John S. Fisher, Gen. Edward Martin, Gen. William G. Price and others will attend the dedication of the new state armory at Scottdale, October 4.

2 New Castle Men Held in Drug Case

NEW CASTLE, Pa., Sept. 8.—(AP.)—Guy Angelucci, 29, restaurant proprietor, and Joe Covanna, 23, were arrested here as alleged members of a narcotic vending organization. They were taken to Pittsburgh for hearings before a United States commissioner.

Barbara Lee

Takes You Joyously Through a Busy Day!

From early morn till early morn—there are Barbara Lees to make you appear your loveliest self! New canton crepes for town and the stadium . . . lames and velvets for bridge parties or tea . . . and fascinating evening gowns for the most exciting dates on your social calendar. Elegance has at last come into its own and this "luxury note" marks the newest modes. Sleeves become more elaborate, slim tunics are introduced, beading is revived and interest in many frocks is subtly one-sided! Notice these high fashion points in Barbara Lee dresses. Then observe the details of perfect finishing. And rejoice that Barbara Lees are not nearly so expensive as they look!

A—Misses' Street Frock—The sleeves of the bolero stop three-quarters of the way down to show the sleeves of the wool lace blouse beneath. The skirt wears a smart buckle—at the side, of course. Green with lighter green blouse, black with white, black with blue, brown with maize, brown with nude. 14 to 20.

B—Women's Afternoon Frock—For the more important fall and winter festivities, nothing could be more flattering than this colorful metal tunic frock with skirt of velvet. The adjustable sash of metal cloth ties at the side-back. An unusually distinguished dress in black, Manila brown or Independence blue. 34 to 44.

C—Misses' Evening Frock — Of Renaissance velvet with a charming neckline, snug little bodice and circular skirt ending in a tucked net flounce. Twin carnations nod from one shoulder. Black, white, American Beauty, blue or green. 14 to 20.

D—Women's Evening Dress—This sheath-like gown of jeweled crepe has lovely, thinning diagonal lines and a slim belt at the normal waistline. The material is studded with clustered rhinestones . . . white with rubies, white with emeralds, white with sapphires, black with sapphires and black or flesh with white rhinestones . . . . 34 to 44.

CLAIMS FRENCH BLUNDERED IN HEARST CASE

Dr. Coffee Sees Nation With Few Friends Courting More Ill Will by Action

Universal Service

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 8.—The government of France made a technical blunder in expelling William Randolph Hearst from French territory, in the opinion of Dr. Rudolph I. Coffee, rabbi of Sinai Temple, Oakland.

Dr. Coffee has returned recently from a European tour today declared that France has few friends among the families of European rulers and that she needlessly incurred American good will in ordering Mr. Hearst to leave France as a result of his exposure of a secret treaty document two years ago.

RELATIONS STRAINED

The Rabbi's statement follows:

"My travels this summer indicated to me that France has few friends among the European nations. Right now the relations between Italy and France are quite acute.

"Why France should seek to arouse additional ill will through harsh treatment of Americans passes my understanding. Yet I regret that that seems to be her present attitude.

AMERICANS VICTIMIZED

"From what I can gather France looks upon every American tourist as a millionaire to be exploited for commercial gain. It is well known that Americans are taxed higher prices in the stores than European purchasers. When France is so fast losing our good will it is a technical blunder to expel so influential an American as William Randolph Hearst.

"Thirty years ago France regretted the wrong done to Capt. Albert Dreyfuss, and she will soon regret that she treated Mr. Hearst with such scant courtesy."

Find of Girl's Hair Spurs Kidnap Hunt

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—(INS.)—Three locks of brown hair may prove the cause of a lot of trouble for Charles Edward Pope, 66-year-old apartment caretaker. Police, holding Pope for the kidnaping of 10-year-old Grace Budd two years ago, were planning his release today, but finding of the hair in one of Pope's trunks changed their minds.

The locks, police said, resembled the hair of the missing child. The trunk was found on Pope's farm, in the Catskills.

A. F. of L. Foresees Insurance Battle

ATLANTIC CITY, Sept. 8.—(INS.)—The executive council of the American Federation of Labor today resumed preparations of its report and recommendations to be made at the Boston convention next month.

A convention fight was forecast by the attack of William Green, president of the Federation, on compulsory unemployment insurance. He declared such a policy would fasten the dole system on American labor and industry.

PARIS, BERMUDA TRIPS FOR GIRLS

de luxe trips the classes of workers to whom the awards will eventually be made have been divided into five groups. There is to be one girl more fortunate than all the others in these five groups. She will get the Gloria Swanson trip to Paris. The trips to Bermuda, however, will be awarded so that one trip, all expenses paid, will be awarded to each group. This means that when the winning candidate for the Paris trip is announced, another girl in the same group will also be given a trip to Bermuda.

GROUPS CLASSIFIED

The groups have been arranged as follows:

Group 1—Telephone operators in the employ of the telephone company or operators in charge of private switchboards at hotels, clubs, mercantile houses and industrial plants. This group is limited in its entirety to telephone operators.

Group 2—Office workers, bookkeepers and clerical help; stenographers; private secretaries.

Group 3—Cashiers, restaurant employes, grocery store, chain store, etc., employes and workers in industrial plants other than the classification in the preceding groups.

Group 4—Department store and women's specialty shop employes.

Group 5—Home girls, students and school teachers.

The awards are open to every unmarried girl (excepting professional beauties, such as stage girls or artists' models, and excepting employes of the Sun-Telegraph and their families), who is a citizen of the United States and who is or will be at least 21 years of age at the time the awards are to be made, November 15, and who now lives and has a permanent residence within the territory where the Sun-Telegraph is in daily distribution.

NOMINATION BLANKS

Nomination entering a girl in the contest may be sent in by the girl herself, by members of her family, or by a friend, addressed to the Paris-Bermuda Tours Editor, Sun-Telegraph, Pittsburgh.

Any girl who lives in Pittsburgh or in the reading area where the Sun-Telegraph is sold, and who is eligible according to the requirements, may fill in and mail the nomination blank on this page and thus become one of the candidates to be considered when the magnificent Paris-Bermuda trips are awarded.

Upon receipt of the nomination blank the candidate will be notified in detail of the further requirements in the matter of securing one of the trips.

Now, girls! Get busy! Send in your nomination blank today!

WOODCOCK OFF ON DRY TOUR

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—(INS.)—For the first time since assuming the responsibility for prohibition enforcement in the United States two months ago, Col. Amos W. W. Woodcock, the new dry director, was in the field today to make a preliminary study of the results of his administration.

Ohio was selected as the first state to be inspected. During the remainder of the week Woodcock will visit the various enforcement officers both to study their efficiency and sound the general sentiment towards enforcement.

Woodcock will be forced to return to Washington for a conference Friday with the Bureau of the Budget on the prohibition appropriation for the 1932 fiscal year beginning next July. He will ask the budget bureau to approve appropriations for 500 new dry agents. This will mean an expenditure of several million dollars over the present appropriation of about $15,000,000 at a time when President Hoover is calling for rigid economies in order that the one per cent tax reduction may be maintained.

PINCHOT OPENS CAMPAIGN

HAWLEY, Pa., Sept. 8.—(AP.)—Gifford Pinchot, Republican nominee for governor, today opened the most strenuous campaign in recent years of Pennsylvania political history.

The former governor chose Hawley, in the northeastern corner of Pennsylvania and little more than 20 miles from his home at Milford, for delivery of the first speech in his campaign tour of the 67 counties of Pennsylvania. He arrived here this morning from Milford in an open touring car nearly two months before the general election on November 4.

From Hawley Pinchot traveled to Honesdale, where he had luncheon. Forest City and Montrose were the remaining stops set for the first day's tour in which the Republican dry nominee covered two counties—Wayne and Susquehanna.

The itinerary calls for a visit to Pittsburgh Saturday.

The Housewife's Duty

To her home, not to her grocer

The housewife was not put on earth to support grocers. She owes no grocer a living. She does owe herself and her family the greatest amount of the best food her money can buy. Her only duty when buying food is to her home.

The honest grocer asks no favors. He does not expect charity. He is willing to be judged by the amount of good food he gives for the consumer's dollar.

A & P is a grocer who has already been judged by many consumers. After seventy years in business, it enjoys the patronage of over 5,000,000 thrifty housewives.

So large a following of critical shoppers is the result of a single simple fact—that the public buys where it obtains the most for its money.

HOLLYWOOD AND GOTHAM PASSING IN REVIEW; NEW PICTURE OPENS

James Cruze Will Direct Betty Compson, His Ex-Wife, in Film

By HARRISON CARROLL.

(Copyright, 1930, Premier Syndicate)

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 8.

A quaint community, Hollywood.

With their divorce scarcely cold, Betty Compson has been signed to play the feminine lead in James Cruze's next picture. And, to make it more diverting, the picture is to be called "She Got What She Wanted."

The contracts were signed only yesterday and Betty is in heavy conference with the dressmaker to prepare her wardrobe for the [illegible] role.

Betty Compson

Meanwhile Hugh Trevor, young leading man, continues to escort the blonde actress at Hollywood parties, and at the supper clubs.

The problem of the Hollywood hostess is becoming more and more involved. In a dinner party of 20 it would require a good deal of maneuvering not to sit at least one pair of ex-mates together. But then it doesn't matter so much out here where friendships survive divorce.

A NATURAL QUESTION

Ann Harding, who's a modest person, is a little bewildered at all the praise bestowed upon Holliday."

"Do they always go on like this," she inquires, "when somebody makes a good picture?"

NEW RACKET

Hollywood has developed a new racket. A group of small boys hang around the studio entrances with autograph books and small cameras. When the stars come out the boys waylay them, and get their signatures. Some obligingly pose for snapshots. These apparently avid fans then peddle their wares to a certain curio shop for a fat profit.

ACTING FOR FUN

The vice president of a famous New York jewelry concern comes to Hollywood twice a year to take personal orders from the stars. Aside from his business connection he is very popular among the film people and is widely entertained. Just for a lark he appeared in a scene in Charlie Chaplin's new picture, and his wife, a former dancer, is in Constance Bennett's new film at Pathe.

TWO REVIVALS

The two talkie versions of "East Lynne" are on the verge of production.

Fox makes one and the Halperin Brothers the other. There will be this difference, however. The Fox picture will be in the original period of the story, 1860, while the Halperins are modernizing their version. They also have changed its name to "Ex-Flame."

Ann Harding

Ann Harding, Conrad Nagel and Clive Brook are in the Fox film, while the Halperins have just signed Marion Nixon and Norman Kerry for their talkie. This incidentally is the first picture Kerry had made in some time.

M'KENNA ASSIGNED

Since "Men Without Women," Kenneth MacKenna has been in demand among the film producers.

As soon as he finishes in Constance Bennett's new picture, he returns to his home lot, Fox, to play the role of Captain Trevalin in "The Man Who Came Back."

You'll recall this film will celebrate the reunion of the starring team of Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell. Raoul Walsh directs.

MR. HOLT IN HARRIS AS NEWEST FILM GANGSTER

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

It is the Law and the Underworld in a grand old movie tussle in the Harris again. The picture is "The Squealer." It has Jack Holt as a gangster leader.

The film keeps pretty well to the usual Hollywood formula for this type of drama. Rival gangs battle for supremacy. There is a prison break. But it does offer some variety. The heroine is really a wife and not just a gangster's "moll." Besides, Holt, in the film, goes to prison and comes out without his mustache. And Mr. Holt without a mustache is a novelty.

HELLO, SONNY BOY

The only Boy angle is sneaked in with Little Davey Lee present as the gangster's son. However, Holt doesn't sing him any songs. But he does tiptoe to the little trundle bed to take a last peep at the lad. Then out into the night he goes. And rat-a-tat goes the machine gun. The morgue gets another job.

Of course, there is a lot more stuff to the picture than this. There is, for example, Dorothy Revier in the role of Gangster Holt's wife. She's really true to him, but he can't "see" it. Doesn't she give him away to the police! So he labels her "the squealer" and he gets set to "get" a lawyer-guy whom he figures is the new man in her life.

OH, BUTCHER BOY!

There is, too, Zasu Pitts with her blank face and her colorless voice. She's the dumb servant, as usual. But we guess she has a good time—she and the butcher boy. But we can't be sure. The censors have intervened and taken some words right out of her mouth.

After all, "The Squealer" is just another picture of underworld life as Hollywood sees it. The hero is just a good old gangster. Hurrah!

French Girls

Yola D'Avril, top, Fifi D'Orsay and Sandra Ravel, the girls in "Those Three French Girls," a new Cosmopolitan production soon to be released here. The film was directed by Harry Beaumont and it features Reginald Denny in the male lead.

Things I Never Knew Till Now

That on a wall at 46th st. and 1st ave. is a tablet marking the spot where the British executed the Revolutionary hero, Nathan Hale, who regretted that he had but one life to give for his country.

That the word "brain" does not occur in the Bible.

That a copy of "Faust" was found in the possession of an American Indian in North Carolina in 1829.

That the back door of the nation's Capitol is now its front. Ditto for the White House.

That the Government collects six cents on every package of 20 cigarets.

That the Statue of Liberty faces Europe and turns its back to the United States.

That you can't buy parts for French clocks in this country.

That Lord Buckhurst, of the time of Elizabeth, was the author of "Gorbodue," the first tragedy written in the English language.

That Shakespeare and Moliere acted parts in their own plays.

That during Henry VIII's reign, to kiss a lady was an act of courtesy, not of familiarity.

That the word "agnostic" was of Huxley's coining.

That it costs "Cy" Curtis $2,000 daily to run his steam yacht, Lyndonia, which is $1,000 a day less than it costs J. P. Morgan to cruise around in his Corsair.

That torture was last used in England in 1640.

That it was during the Crusades, in the time of Dick the First, that the custom of using coats of arms was first introduced.

That Caesar, Mahomet and Napoleon were all epileptics.

That David Belasco started as a playwright and producer when he was 16. He also carried a spear at 15 in "Hamlet."

That plus-fours originated in the British Army.

That previous to the Civil War the Federal Government attempted to introduce camels into the U. S. for use in our desert.

That the 1828-1845 coins in Russia were of platinum.

That italics are so called because they were invented in Italy.

That for the purpose of conserving all the alcohol obtainable for munitions (during the last year of the war) the Germans gave the public ½ of one per cent beer. As the information was not made public the citizens drank and enjoyed it never suspecting the difference. (Oh, well somebody told me.)

That steel pens were first used at Washington by N. P. Willis.

That in the Sixteenth Century, in Italy, clocks struck up to 24 from sunset to sunset.

That the Golden Rule was first taught by Confucius.

That the part of Alan-a-Dale in "Robin Hood" is always played by a woman because it was originally written for Jessie Bartlett Davis, famous contralto of the Bostonians; that precedent, and the fact that the score calls for a contralto voice, demand that Alan be entrusted to the unfair sex.

That at present there is but one two-way television set in the entire world. (I'll bet I'm not really appreciated.)

That in Atlantic City when there is a fire all traffic pauses until the apparatus reaches the blaze. This permits the fire wagons to get to any part of the town within three minutes.

That the Burning Tree Golf Club, which numbers many high officials in its membership, won't permit women on the course.

That Washington Monument is steam heated for rheumatic Winter visitors. (He gets paid for this stuff, yet!)

That probably the collar stud you wear in the rear of your shirt neck comes from a cow and ditto your shirt buttons.

That unless you have your pockets cleaned (by a tailor) you carry enough germs to kill an army.

That grass stains on white tennis flannels may be removed by covering the stain with equal parts of tartaric acid and salt. Moisten with water and dry in the sun. (Say! That's worth money!)

That only three passengers lost their lives in accidents on British railways last year. (U. S. railroads please copy.)

That the ageless query: "What came first, the egg or the hen?" has been settled. The bird evolved from lower forms of life before it seriously took up the egg-laying business.

That a husband is not a relative of his wife.

That it is easier to run away with a girl nowadays than it is to keep up with her. And that a woman's voice is naturally higher than a man's yet she insists on raising it. (Look, he's trying to be comical!)

That Daudet said that actors do not die of old age, but that they cease to exist when they no longer command applause.

And that the real hero of many a novel is the publisher.

Guild Subscription Secretary Is Here

Miss Marvin Roth, the Theater Guild subscription secretary, will be in the Nixon box office daily this week from 10 a. m. to 5 p. m., to take care of the subscription tickets for Pittsburgh and to explain the Theater Guild membership for the coming season, the plays to be produced, etc.

LAUNCHES SEA POWER TUBE

MATANZAS, Cuba, Sept. 8.—(AP.)—Prof. Georges Claude, noted French scientist, succeeded in launching a tube by which he believes he will be able to produce inexpensive power from the waters of the Gulf Stream. The work required six hours.

This is the third tube that Prof. Claude has constructed. The others were destroyed in the attempts at launching and the inventor charged at the time that sabotage by interests opposed to his scheme was indicated.

He obtained the co-operation of the Cuban government for the third attempt and soldiers guarded all details of the work. He also got the backing of the French Academy of Sciences and adopted several suggestions for this latest experiment which cost approximately $1,000,000.

NEW PARK UP AT BELLEVUE

Bellevue will have a new recreation park slightly larger than Forbes Field, if voters approve projects to be submitted at the general election November 4.

One proposal is for acquisition by condemnation of six and one-half acres of vacant land near the northern end of the new Jack's Run bridge along the Ohio River boulevard. The land lies north of the boulevard.

The other proposal will be a bond issue of $50,000 to purchase and grade the plot, which consists of 56 lots.

In event the voters approve the proposal, a baseball field and tennis courts will be laid out, according to John R. Longabaugh, acting president of the council. Construction of a swimming pool also may be submitted to the people later, he said. The present swimming pool in Ralph Park is used only by children.

Senator to Attend School Fund Session

NEW CASTLE, Sept. 8.—State Senator George T. Weingartner, member of the commission appointed by Gov. John S. Fisher to study the use of state appropriations for school purposes, leaves Monday for Harrisburg to attend a meeting of the commission. The group will make recommendations to the Legislature.

321 Pupils In Emsworth Schools

Emsworth public schools have enrolled 321 grade pupils with the opening of the fall term, according to R. M. Boggs, supervising principal. High school pupils attend in nearby boroughs.

200 Sob Songs

By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—Life in the song shops today must be more than ever like life at the gaming tables of the Riviera—adventurous, fascinating, exciting, the element of chance ever present. Old standards are no longer reliable. The three formerly most dependable themes—romance, roses and rivers, no longer carry the assurance of certain success. The croon of the megaphone has revolutionized the song-writing world.

Louis Reid.

Some laureate in a Hollywood canyon or a Broadway eerie may decide to pen a lyric to a tearful dancing or turboats or broccoli, and if he can frame it in a whistleable and danceable tune the crooners will put him on the road to riches.

The heaviest royalties today—for the last 90 days, if my ears have not deceived me—must be coursing into the coffers of the authors of "I'm Dancing With Tears in My Eyes," "I'm Singing a Song to the Stars," "On the Sunny Side of the Street" and the stein song of dear old Maine. Some effort was made to sweep a thing called "St. James Infirmary" into the tide of popularity, but it was too doleful to win the fancy of the whistlers and shufflers.

Radio Snaring Best Of Broadway Directors

The microphone men have reached out for the most skillful of the Broadway batons—the most skillful, that is, in translating the classics into Americanese. Directors of musical comedy orchestras are signing radio's dotted lines in ever-growing numbers, for it has been discovered they are as expert in Grieg as in Gershwin. With the feet-tappers of America ever in mind, they know best how to put an air from Chaminade or an aria from Charpentier through the jazz hopper.

The battoned battalion is still kindest, it seems to me, to Chaminade and MacDowell. A salute to the "Scarf Dance" and "To a Wild Rose!" The hot breeze of jazz can neither wither nor stale the charm of their melodies. Chaminade and MacDowell are the answer to the jazz jehovahs' prayers, as Debussy and Richard Strauss are their curse. Debussy and Strauss still elude them—the only masters of music who do.

The "Slumber Hour" has succumbed to the march of commerce. It has fallen within the beat of ballyhoo. For four years it remained untouched, perhaps unnoticed by those aggressive attention-callers with a special message to the ear-cuppers. Perhaps, its utter neglect of the jazz note kept it inviolate so long.

Leslie Joy, once an announcer and now an executive of the N. B. C., was responsible for the origin of the Slumber Hour. It was his idea that melodious classical and semi-classical selections, played by a competent string ensemble, would be a fitting program with which to close the broadcasting day.

Slumber Hour Most Popular in Radio

Scheduled with considerable doubt of its appeal, the program attracted little attention at first. Gradually people began to talk about it and soon bushel baskets were necessary to take care of the fan mail. Its audience now numbers millions. Not so long ago the broadcasters, to test the program's popularity, substituted a dance band for the measures of familiar classics. A storm of protest which extended to Australia sent the radio me, scurrying back to Beethoven.

Of all the misty-eyed balladeers of the nineties Charles K. Harris has been the most industrious. More than 200 tear-jerkers, from "Break the News to Mother," to "I'm Wearing My Heart Away for You" have come from his pen. Harris still enjoys a good cry over his piano through now as a sop to sophistication he allows a rainbow occasionally to peep through.

Like all songwriters Harris has interludes in his career when geographical inspiration seizes him. He, too, has paid tributes to Carolina—who hasn't?—with "In the Hills of Old Carolina." And if you are still curious he has paid his respects to Kentucky, the Mississippi and the "vale of the Shenandoah."

Vincent Lopez is now in his tenth year of buffeting the radio waves. A champion air channel swimmer. . . . The wire network of the N. B. C. totals 32,500 miles. . . . Bill Johnson, most expert of the tap dancers, is also one of the most expert masters of ceremonies. He holds the attention of the ear-drums chiefly by use of a vocal mannerism that is a cross between a chuckle and a whoop. The only spoken newspaper in the world is the Radio Mundial, operated by radio at Mexico City. . . . The first major newspaper story sent by radio came from Battle Harbor, Labrador, on September 6, 1909. It was signed by Robert E. Peary and read: "Stars and Stripes nailed to the Pole."

WE NOW PRESENT

By DARRELL V. MARTIN, Radio Editor

Born in November and influenced by the planet Mars, we have a preference tonight for the All-Sousa program by the Fleetwing Band.

If you like lots of thunder swing into line at 8 o'clock over KDKA. Step lively to "Semper Fidelis," "El Capitan" and "U. S. Field Artillery."

"One Minute Past" is the intriguing title of a 15-minute sketch to be given by the KDKA Players at 8:30. The action takes place in a radio studio.

Claude Morris plays the role of announcer; Ed Harvey is the police inspector—and the girl, Marianne Dempsey.

We recommend "Give Me One Hour" from Frimi's "White Eagle," on WCAE at 9:30.

WHO'S WHO

We had the pleasure of introducing a few dainty girls to celebrities at KDKA yesterday. Among the announcers were Louis Kaufman, Bill Farren and Walter Myers.

Leaving the studios the girls had quite a confab about the boys.

"You know I can't help liking that fellow Louis Myers," said the one.

We wonder how they liked Bill Kaufman, Glenn Thrasher, Claude Riggs.

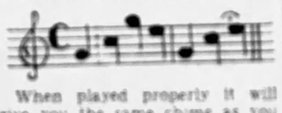
TRY THIS ON YOUR PIANO



When played properly it will give you the same chime as you hear between program announcements.

This is part of our home study course for radio announcers, designed and executed by Zoel Parenteau, musical coach at KDKA.

Boys say Zoel adopted a new theme song while in New York a few weeks ago. It was taken from Act III in "Lohengrin."

QUESTION A DAY:

Helen R.—Are there any women announcers?

A.—A very few out West but none of any prominence. We would discourage your aspirations because the NBC and CBS are thumbs down on feminine voices. Girls who speak over Pittsburgh stations — Evelyn Gardiner, Elsie Lichtenstuhl, Cousin Lora, Marcella Deverson, Josephine Gibson, Ruth Millstone—all have good radio voices but not the least adapted to announcing.

P. E. Robinson, of Jewett, O., nominates Ray Perkins to the post of "Radio Town Crier."

His wife says she turns to the radio page first thing every night. Thanx!

Ever hear anything so vivid as Floyd Gibbons' description of how he lost his eye?

Madame Schumann-Heink is aging rapidly, but she can still sing "The Rosary" with the skill of a young diva. She's billed to sing over NBC and KDKA for the next 16 Sundays, also over both networks September 18.

* * *

Talk about hard-shelled crabs, there were plenty of them in KQV studios Saturday. George Leatherbury imported them from Baltimore.

The radio taste of Pittsburghers has turned to "Moonshine and Honeysuckle"—WCAE at 10—whispers Julius Levin, Sun-Tele sports department.

One hundred and fifty pieces of the Minneapolis Symphony are to play over WJAS at 9 o'clock.

TODAY'S TID BIT:

More than two miles of fine wire go into the coils of a dynamic loudspeaker.

KAUFMAN TIED WITH RIGGS IN RADIO POLL

F. G. Rodgers Leads Artists Here—McNamee, Gibbons Top Stars on Networks

Louis Kaufman and Glenn Riggs are tied with 104 votes each in first returns of the Pittsburgh Radio Poll. A few ballots counted this morning to give the trend of voting showed Ford Miller next high with 39. William Farren, Herbert McGee and Ted Kay are next with 37, 34 and 31. Others making a favorable showing include Fred Weber, Claude Morris and Paul Flenger.

M'NAMEE AHEAD

Frederick K. Rodgers leads local artists with 107 votes, followed by Elsie Breese Mitchell, Bob Meeker, Wild Oscar, Gus Schmaltz, Don Bestor, Edward Sprague, Max Kroen and the Lawson sisters.

Graham McNamee is far in front among network announcers with 91 votes, followed by John S. Young, Bill Hay, Wallace Butterworth, Alwyn Bach, Ted Pearson, Alois Havrilla, Paul Tramont and Curt Peterson. Milton Cross, who won the poll last year, is low man with 32 votes.

Floyd Gibbons is out front among network artists. He has 105 votes. Rudy Vallee is next, followed by Jessica Dragonette, Phil Cook, Jesse Crawford, Seth Parker, Andy Sannella, Peter Higgins and Henry Burbig.

SALUTE POPULAR

Westinghouse Salute, the network program which originates in KDKA studios, is by far the most popular network feature, according to early returns. This feature received 109 votes in a few minutes' tabulation this morning, indicating that it will be a winner. Other favorites seem to be Lucky Strike Dance, Amos and Andy, Dutch Minstrels, Uncle Abe and David, Guy Lombardo's Canadians, Cities Service, Armour, Mystery House, Sunshine Hour, South Sea Islanders, Roxy, Nit Wits, Interwoven Pair, Blackstone, Arabesque, Palmolive and RKO Hour.

Quite a surprise is forecast in the balloting for favorite Pittsburgh programs. The first count gives the Blues Chasers a lead over established programs. They have 65 votes, followed by the Morning Parade, Little German Band, Twenty Fingers of Sweetness, Sacred Songs, KDKA Players, Mozart Trio, Noon Novelties, Fleetwing Band, Freedom program.

Beginning tomorrow the Sun-Telegraph will print tabulations of the voting.

30 Stations Relay Programs Abroad

Thirty American relay broadcasting stations are now engaged in transmitting their programs via short waves for foreign pickup. Most of them are adjuncts of regular broadcasting stations. In addition, the Federal Radio Commission has issued construction permits authorizing the building of six others.

CHAPTER I.

Robin Dale was at breakfast when he first heard the news of the tragedy. James Milburn, the playwright, was with him, having spent the night at Dale's apartment. The message came from Capt. Blake.

"Dale." Thought I'd be able to catch you at home. . . . Hurry over to the Sycamore on Central Park West. There's a big story . . . Zelma Shaw's apartment. She shot and killed Oscar Welling and committed suicide."

Dale hung up the telephone, breakfast was forgotten.

"I'll have to run, Jim . . . crime is no respecter of conventions, so you'll have to finish up your visit without a host. Zelma Shaw—you probably know her—has messed up things—killed Oscar Welling and herself."

They discussed the affair as Dale got ready to depart.

"Of course I know Zelma—an ornamental chorus girl and a detrimental gold-digger . . . she was headed for a fall," said Milburn.

"Fly high and fall far, isn't that it? Called the Titian Butterfly or something like that, wasn't she?"

"One of the newspaper lads pinned that on her during one of her earlier cases . . . You've read the recent Welling divorce case, in which she was co-respondent? This affair is probably the tragic aftermath, the reaping of the whirlwind."

"I read the headlines . . . don't pay much attention to divorces. It's difficult enough for children to keep track of their fathers and mothers without a busy scribe tryin' to do it."

Robin Dale slipped into his topcoat and moved to the door, after he had telephoned the office.

"Stay as long as you want, Jim . . . If you're wise you'll make friends with the Scotch, a book and the easy-chair—while I hie me hence on the trail of a butterfly."

The Sycamore was a sedate-appearing apartment house facing the park. There was an air of respectable solidity about it which made the tragedy that had occurred within its granite walls appear almost incongruous. It was not at all the type of dwelling one would have expected the Titian Butterfly to choose as an abode. That thought remained with Robin Dale as he entered the huge, silent foyer.

At the far end of the foyer, facing the two elevators of the apartment, was the telephone switchboard. Just beyond the elevators a short, narrow corridor led to the three apartments on the ground floor. There were three doors, one on either side of the corridor and one at the end of it facing the foyer.

It was in the latter, the colored boy at the board informed him, that Miss Shaw had resided. Dale's knock was answered by a uniformed policeman who, upon learning the reporter's identity, permitted him to enter. He stepped into a small, alcoved entrance hall which led abruptly through a lattice-work arch into a large sumptuously furnished living room.

The sweet odor of heliotrope lay on the air lazily, like a bird on wing. There was the deep silence that comes of heavy-cushioned carpets and dark velvet drapes. Capt. Blake and Sergt. Jardin were talking in low tones near a window; they nodded greeting to Dale. Through a half-open door he could see Phelps at work for fingerprints in the boudoir. One corner of a posted bed was in his line of vision. Across the room there was another arch which led through swinging gates of light wrought iron, into the dining room and beyond that, undoubtedly, to the kitchen.

A secretaire in one corner of the living room was open. Drawers had been pulled out and papers were scattered about. Dale strolled to the secretaire and gazed down at the disorder, the two drawers were partly open. In one of them he glimpsed the pearl handle of a small revolver.

As he turned to look back into the room he saw a body laid out on the lounge. It was Oscar Welling. He was completely clothed even to his top-coat. The rigidness of death was on the corpse and the skin of the face was white and chalky. A stain of red on the white shirt told its story.

Dale walked to the boudoir door and looked in. Zelma had been laid on the bed. She was attired only in the flimsiest of underthings, as they probably had found her. On the floor beside the bed a dress lay in a heap, another of creamy white with beads which glistened as the sun's rays fell on them through the window, was laid out at the foot of the bed. Phelps was carefully scrutinizing a glass filled with amber liquid that stood on a small table at the end of the bed.

You won't have to ponder much about this," a low voice came to Dale. He turned and found Capt. Blake behind him.

"Death is always fascinatin', captain. Murder and suicide you said. It still holds?"

"Very apparent. We found Welling near the door as though he had started to leave. He was shot through the heart and fell forward into the room, face down. We found the gun just inside the boudoir door. The woman, half clad, had fallen across the bed, her feet dangling to the floor. Dr. Wattles pronounced it arsenic, there's a glass filled with it in her room."

"What time did Dr. Wattles figure?" Dale asked.

"They've both been dead since 11 or thereabouts last night."

"What makes you so sure of the murder-suicide theory, Captain Blake?"

"It's pretty obvious on the face of things, but there's one thing makes it certain. The door was locked on the inside and barred! They had to break in. There's only this one door and as you've noticed all the windows have an iron grill-work on the outside, being on the ground floor. That settles all arguments."

"Except that it doesn't fit your characters, captain, or the rest of the facts. Considerin' that Welling just gave up a home and a wife and a lot of alimony for Zelma Shaw, it isn't likely that he'd be walkin' out on her. And if he was she had plenty of others to take his place. Her love affairs were too numerous for Zelma to kill herself over one of them. And, did you notice her own revolver is still in the drawer of the secretaire?"

DUGGAN DENIES POSTAL CHARGE

"Ridiculous" was the term Frank L. Duggan, chairman of the Better Traffic Committee used today in branding charges that agitation for proposed handling of traffic in the vicinity of the new postoffice site had been prompted by someone's desire to sell an old warehouse building for parcel post headquarters.

At the same time Duggan pointed out it had been the committee's desire to center parcel post activities in the new building on Grant street as well as to bring about adequate provision of traffic accommodations.

Some time ago, Duggan said, he heard rumors that entrances to the new site were not large enough to handle the volume of mail trucks necessary for the delivery of mails. For that reason, he said the old warehouse location unknown, was suggested.

During their visit here, government checkers sat in windows high up in the Koppers Building to watch the traffic volume. Under such conditions, Duggan charges, it would be impossible to get an accurate count.

BRAZILIAN GETS BEAUTY CROWN

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil, Sept. 8.—(AP)—The title of Miss Universe was conferred today upon Hollanda Pereira, representative of Brazil in the international beauty contest.

Second place, went equally to Fernanda Goncales, of Portugal, and Alice Diplorackou, of Greece. Beatrice Lee, who was Miss United States was accorded third place.

The girls were chosen from a group of 26 winners of previous beauty contests in all parts of the world. The contest did not permit bathing suits but only evening gowns, street clothing and the like.

Japanese and Chinese In U. S. Army School

FORT LEAVENWORTH, Kan., Sept. 8.—(AP)—A Japanese and a Chinese were among the 235 army officers enrolled in the United States Army command and general staff school opening here today. They are Maj. Masafumi Yanaurhi, of the Japanese Imperial Army, and Tsi-Ming Chow, of the Chinese Army.

Lawyers of World Draw New Air Code

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—(INS.)—The International Law Association today was to recommend to governments of the world a new international aerial code. Recommendations governing the use of radio and wireless also were to be made.

RELIEF THAT KONJOLA GAVE CAME TO STAY

Carpenter Delighted With Way New and Different Medicine Conquered His Rheumatism.

Konjola, the new and different medicine of 32 ingredients, is not designed to give mere temporary relief. It is emphatically not that kind of medicine.

MR. T. A. STROHM

Rarely a day passes but that some happy man or woman returns to the Dow drug store, Penn avenue and Sixth street, Pittsburgh, to tell of the lasting results from this modern medicine for the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, and for rheumatism, neuritis and nervousness. Visit the Konjola Man and get all the facts about this remarkable medicine that has done so many remarkable things. Hear of any number of cases as interesting and encouraging as that of Mr. T. A. Strohm, carpenter, R. F. D. No. 2, Sharpsburg, near this city. Right now read what he said to the Konjola Man:

"Last February, Konjola gave me quick relief from rheumatism and kidney trouble. The pains were so severe I could not sleep, and often I was in such misery I could not work. I had terrible headaches and was always taking laxatives. My whole system was in a deplorable condition. But it took only four bottles of Konjola to free me of all my ailments. I have been at work every day, and I can easily understand why so many people are enthusiastic about Konjola."

Thus Konjola works, speedily and thoroughly, yet it is best to take a complete treatment of from six to eight bottles for best results.

The Konjola Man is at the Dow drug store, Penn avenue and Sixth street, Pittsburgh, where daily he is meeting the public and explaining all about this remarkable medicine.

50,000 POLES JOIN PROTEST

POSNAN, Poland, Sept. 8.—(AP.)—Fifty thousand inhabitants of Western Poland demonstrated in protest against "German aggressiveness" regarding this area, which was German before the World War and which the Poles now say the Germans are trying to recover.

Representatives of various political parties, including the government party, the National Democrats, and the Central Radical bloc made speeches and later a procession was formed to hang Gottfried Treviranus, German minister of occupied regions, in effigy.

Treviranus in recent speeches has been biting regarding the Polish corridor and his actions were interpreted in Poland as meaning that the territory lost by postwar treaties should be recovered by force if necessary. His effigy was labeled:

"The fate of those who want to attack Polish lands."

The demonstrators asked the chief of Western Poland's administration to demand that the government take action before the League of Nations against the alleged German attacks.

Meadville Fireman Heads Association

CONNEAUT LAKE PARK, Sept. 8.—Fred Carman, Meadville, was elected president of the Western Pennsylvania Firemen's Association at its closing session here. It was voted to hold a three-day convention next year. Erie, Mercer, Venango, Crawford, Lawrence, Warren, Forest and McKean counties are included.

Other officers are Capt. J. R. Davis, Sharon, vice president; Lawrence Leberman, Meadville, secretary, and Chief A. G. Dalby, Oil City, treasurer.

Charles Garkenbarh, Greenville, is chairman of the executive board, composed of P. J. Kuhn, Erie; Charles Cease, Cambridge Springs; Chief Charles H. Lynn, New Castle; Frank Hand, Titusville, and Chief Louis Ribb, Franklin.

May Be Made With Or Without the Peplum

Pattern 1951

Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph 15c Practical Pattern

By ANNE ADAMS

A stunning model for early fall retains gracefully flared capelets and adds a harmonizing peplum, which may, of course, be omitted. The skirt has just enough flare to be graceful, yet practical for the heavy silks in vogue. The deep, pointed vestee is flattering and decidedly slenderizing.

Pattern 1951 may be made of flat or canton crepe, dull satin, chiffon velvet, faille silk or marocain. In black and white it is stunning; if you prefer a color, brown, navy, dark green and the wine shades are very good. The vestee with these colors may be ecru, rose or beige.

May be obtained only in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38 and 40. Size 14 require 3¾ yards of 39-inch material.

No dressmaking experience is necessary to make this model with our pattern. Yardage for every size, and simple, exact instructions are given.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins carefully wrapped, or stamps, for each pattern. Write plainly your name, address and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE WANTED.

OUR NEW FALL AND WINTER FASHION BOOK, containing exquisite models for adults and children and an excellent assortment of transfer patterns and stamped novelties, is NOW READY. Price FIFTEEN CENTS. Book with pattern, 25 cents. Address all mail and orders to Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Pattern Department, 243 West Seventeenth street, New York City.

1.—Enclose 15 cents in coins.
2.—Write clearly NUMBERS of patterns and SIZE wanted.
3.—Write or print your NAME and ADDRESS plainly.
4.—If you want SUN-TELEGRAPH Style Book send 10c extra.
5.—Address your request to

4 DIE, 42 HURT IN RAIL WRECK

CALCUTTA, Sept. 8.—(AP.)—Four were killed and 42 injured in the derailment of the Dacca mail train. One of the coaches fell into a culvert and was submerged.

The disaster was caused by the removal of bolts from the plates that held the rails together. All 10 coaches of the train were overturned.

Autoist Dies as Car Plunges 100 Feet

GREENUP, Ky., Sept. 8.—(AP.)—Fred Pauley, 40, of East Greenup, was killed when his automobile ran over a 100-foot embankment.

SPANISH STRIKE ENDS ABRUPTLY

SAN SEBASTIAN, Spain, Sept. 8.—(AP.)—With the general strike ended as suddenly as it had flared up, this city was tranquil today—the second day of the presence of the King, the Queen and the royal entourage for the summer court season.

The strike, which had resulted in numerous riots, was settled late Saturday, the strike committee agreeing to call off demonstrations and the civil authorities consenting to the release of demonstrators who had been arrested.

King Alfonso, who had insisted on coming to San Sebastian Saturday as scheduled, despite the disturbed situation, received his greatest satisfaction in greeting his son, the Prince of Asturias, who had just returned from his first trip abroad. The Prince's health, delicate heretofore, has shown much improvement in the last six months.

Spider and Web In Pepper Puzzle Gardener

CONNELLSVILLE, Sept. 8.—John Riggen is trying to determine how a spider and web, as well as a large blue worm, got inside of a pepper he found in his garden. He scanned the pepper carefully but was unable to find any holes.

SLEUTH, THUG DIE IN DUEL

DETROIT, Sept. 8.—(AP.)—Detective Edward Barney of the Detroit Police Department, and a gunman were wounded fatally in a gun battle here.

The dead gunman was identified tentatively as Leo Genova.

Police were sent to a residence near the suburb of Highland Park after receiving word that the place was a "gangster hangout."

Barney, who only recently was appointed detective, was eager to show he merited promotion, according to other officers, and rushed the rear door of the house alone. After he entered, shots were heard.

SUITOR KILLS GIRL AND SELF

GREENSBORO, N. C., Sept. 8.—(AP.)—Laurel Jackson Sams, 22, fatally shot his 15-year-old sweetheart, Bernice McCaskill, here and then sent a bullet through his head to end his life.

The shooting occurred at the home of N. L. Phillips. Lela Horner, a friend of the couple, told police the girl's mother, Mrs. John L. McCaskill, had told Sams to stop going with her daughter.

Sams sent a message to the McCaskill girl telling her a member of the Phillips family wanted to see her. Her visit to the Phillips' home ended in the tragedy.

TWO DEAD, 14 INJURED IN AUTO MISHAPS

Volpe Cases Dropped, File Shows

SIDE WALKS of PITTSBURGH

by WILLIAM PFARR

Small-town Gossip — Nelson Brown, the good-natured band leader who conducted the Tracy-Brown Orchestra at the Plaza last year, is out of the music racket. He's selling electric signs in Texas, or some place. Good luck, Nelson, as the city papers say.

One of Milt Crandall's good friends is Ma Sunday, wife of Billy, the evangelist. A few years ago Milt almost convinced Ma (who seems to be the business half of the family) that Billy should make talkies of his sermon. Milt's selling argument was that Sunday would then be the world evangelist, alive for the ages.

The recent balloon race from Cleveland must have recalled sad experiences to certain Pittsburghers who financed the races here in 1928 and 1929. The first race showed a loss of $30,000 and the second, to add insult to insult, $20,000.

Ernie Roser, the publicist, is complaining. Ernie says these wide roads they're building nowadays are more bother than they're worth. Ernie says twice as many accidents happen on the wider roads than on the narrow roads because the drivers think they can take more chances. He says: "Give me the good old narrow road of my boyhood days."

Whatever became of that volume published by Mr. Olmsted, the Boston engineer, who was brought to town by Mayor Magee to suggest public improvements for Pittsburgh? Well, it's gone out of circulation and a friend of ours says that all the improvements for which our public officials are taking credit for today were really suggested by Mr. Olmsted many years ago and that Billy Magee should get the credit. This friend hinted that certain persons had retired all of the Olmsted volumes.

Hiram Hirsh, the local boy on the Public Service Commission, was in Atlantic City recently. Hiram bought a book of Russian short stories and asked the attendant to put him in a beach chair where he wouldn't be bothered by conversation.

Well, the fellow put Hiram next to a girl who, he said, was French and no speak English. And after Hiram had been reading a few minutes the girl turned to him and said, "Aren't you Mr. Hirsh of Pittsburgh?" Hiram said yes.

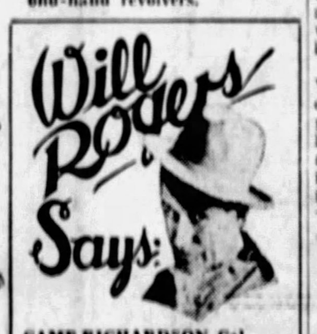
Will Rogers Says:



CAMP RICHARDSON, Cal., Sept. 8.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

Just in case Mr. Coolidge and all the other columnists are short something to comment on, try the Argentines' new president's name, "Ura-Burro." We are beginning to find out what those South American republics do with their one battleship each. They use it for their presidents to escape on.

We are up among this Nevada divorce colony "for picture purposes only." An old lady 87 years old came on the set to watch us shoot. She was serving time here, she told me. "Life's too short to let one man ruin it. I am going to get my freedom and have some fun." And she was asking for the custody of four minor children.

Yours, WILL.

WILMERDING MEN ESCAPE NEW TRIAL

Prosecutor Quashes Charges Two and Half Years After Disagreement of Jury

If the wheels of justice were cogwheels, someone might be justified in cracking wise to the extent of remarking that occasionally a gear or two is stripped.

When it was reported that some unidentified person had taken a pot shot at John E. Williams, former police officer of Wilmerding and later a prohibition agent, now a private detective, the question arose:

"What happened to the shooting case in which the Volpe brothers, of Wilmerding, were involved that resulted in the death of Constable Harry F. Davenport?"

Checking up of the case in the district attorney's office brought to light that John, Louis and James Volpe and Michael Valentino were put on trial in January, 1927, but the jury disagreed and was discharged. Judge James B. Drew, in censuring the jury, said:

"You might just as well have arrived at a verdict, for some other jury will have to."

JUDGE WAS WRONG

But Judge Drew was wrong, for two years and six months later, in June, 1929, the cases against the Volpe brothers were nolle prossed at the request of the prosecutors, according to the record in the clerk of courts' office. Assistant District Attorney George F. P. Langfitt appeared before Judge Drew at that time and asked that the cases be nolle prossed.

District Attorney Andrew T. Park said yesterday he did not know just why the cases were quashed, but that the commonwealth should have gotten a conviction in the case.

The Volpe brothers, John, James and Louis, were indicted on three counts each, charging felonious assault and battery and Valentino on one charge of inciting to riot after a riot in November, 1926, in the Wilmerding Police Station, in which Constable Davenport was shot.

But this case is not the only one in which the Volpe brothers have figured that ended in its being thrown out a considerable length of time after indictment or trial, according to district attorney's records.

The name of Volpe first appears in the district attorney's files in May, 1919, when John Volpe, who was indicted for murder, was tried and acquitted before Judge Thomas D. Carnahan.

Guy Volpe, according to the records, was indicted in September, 1921, on a charge of felonious assault. This charge was nolle prossed by Judge Ambrose B. Reid, November 9, 1923.

James Volpe was indicted September, 1921, on a charge of carrying concealed weapons and this charge was also nolle prossed by Judge Reid at the same time John's case was disposed of.

The next entry in the district attorney's records shows that John Volpe was tried October 24, 1929, on charges of aggravated assault and battery, and after being convicted, was granted a new trial, but never has been re-tried.

Another entry shows that Arthur Volpe was indicted June 6, 1929, on a charge of maintaining a gambling house. This case was listed for trial March 19, 1930, and again on April 21, 1930, but there is no record of the case ever having been tried.

FOR 'COUNTY CAESARS' EPITAPHS'!

MISS ANNA MADDEN WITH MODEL FOR 14 COUNTY ROAD PYLONS (MAN IS SCALE SIZE)

Rounded granite for the most part unornamented, this pylon with electric sign to guide motorists on county boulevards, Pittsburgh Sculptor Frank Vittor says it should be sculpturally-designed, be beautiful, be educational instead of space for "county Caesars" epitaphs."

PYLONS ON NEW BOULEVARDS UNADORNED

Sculptor Opposes Plan to Ban Decorations From Huge Markers of Granite

The Ohio River boulevard and the Sawmill Run road will have 14 pylons on which electric signs will warn of principal intersections. The pylons will be of granite, rounded base and for the most part, unornamented.

Suggestions that they be decorative and contain some sculptural design were made by Frank Vittor, Pittsburgh sculptor, following the announcement that the 14 markers would be constructed at a cost of $38,000. Others believed that some legends regarding historic points along the road might be inscribed.

But the road department believes the pylons should be simply constructed. They will mark points of entry to the county boulevard system.

Four of the portals, to be about 10 feet high and built of Southern granite, will be erected at the Superior avenue entrance to the Ohio River boulevard, two more at the Horne Camp road and two at Island avenue, McKees Rocks.

Others will be placed at the Verona road end of the Allegheny River boulevard, at the Warrington avenue terminal of the Saw Mill Run road and two at the Woodrock street connection.

Vittor, in discussing the pylons, said:

"To begin with, I do not believe the same design should be used for all of the 14 markers for the several highways," when showed photographs of the proposed highway markers.

"Each highway should have its individual design. Second, the evident purpose of the markers seems to be to carry the names of the County Commissioners, road builders and engineers and so on, and they convey the idea that they are tombstones to these modest, retiring gentleman, duplicated all along the various highways.

"The space occupied by the county Caesars' epitaphs should be filled with symbols of historical events taking place in the locality. This would not only make the markers more beautiful, but also educational."

SEES RUSS SET FOR WAR

Children in Soviet Russia are in military training, preparing for the war against "Imperialism," which Russia believes will come within two years, according to Colsten E. Wayne, former University of Pittsburgh professor, and now of Amherst, who has just returned from a tour of the Soviet.

The country, he said, is rapidly becoming industrialized along American lines, with many Americans instructing factory workers. There is still a great deal of poverty in the country, he said.

Third Teeth!

MRS. MARGARET BURNS, 93

WOMAN AT 93 CUTS TEETH

Mrs. Margaret Burns, 93 years old this autumn, still is as fit as a fiddle and to prove she retains her "youth," has started to cut her third set of teeth.

Several days ago Mrs. Burns, who lives at 614 Armandale street, North Side, began to have "growin' pains" in her jaws. Deciding to investigate, a dentist found a molar just breaking through her gums. And now she is happy in the thought that she's going to have a real set of teeth, instead of the store set she refuses to wear because it hurts her gums.

Mrs. Burns, who lives with her daughter, Mary, is emphatic in her tirades against what she calls "unladylike dress" by the women and girls of today.

She said:

"Why when I was a girl we'd never think of letting anyone gaze at our ankles. I don't mind styles like that so much, but when the skirts come up around the knee I draw the line."

She was asked:

"How long do you think you'll live?"

"Well, if I feel as good 10 years from now as I do today I'll live a lot longer."

Each morning Mrs. Burns takes a walk alone around the North Side district and often does shopping by herself downtown. She is a member of the Ninth United Presbyterian Church and attends services every Sunday morning.

As soon as her new teeth grow in she's going to give her false ones away, she avers.

MAN ON WAY TO WORK KILLED

Pittsburgher in Accident Near Zelienople Dies; Road Crashes Take Toll

Two men were dead, and 14 persons were in hospitals today as a result of automobile accidents in the Pittsburgh district.

Joseph Russan of 2324 Atmore street, Pittsburgh, injured in an accident on the Perry highway near Zelienople, died of a fracture of the skull in the Ellwood City Hospital, according to a police report.

John Haid, 41, of 8 Gregory street, was killed while on his way to work today when he ran against a machine driven by Albert Ellis, 22, of 3326 Francis street, at Fourth and Liberty avenues, police said.

Frank Renk, of 606 Hays street, who was with Haid, told police that they had left a Carrick car and were running across the street to get a McKees Rocks car when Haid ran into the side of Ellis' automobile. Ellis was held for the coroner.

Miss Catherine Kissel, 68, of 202 Stratford avenue, is in a serious condition in the Homeopathic Hospital with a possible fracture of the skull and internal injuries received, police say, when she was struck by a machine driven by Frank R. Reagan, at Negley avenue and Coral street. Regan was released in $1,000 bail.

CRASH HURTS SIX

Six persons, four of them women, were injured early yesterday when automobiles driven by John McKay, 22, of Larimer, Pa., and Edgar Corliss, 37, of 1517 Sixth avenue, Altoona, collided on the William Penn Highway, near Wilkinsburg.

McKay and three of his passengers, Mary Bickerstaff, 26, of Irwin; Adeline Combetti, 24, of Jeannette, and Loretta Pondstone, 17, of Irwin, suffered lacerations and bruises, as did Corliss and Mrs. Olga Dunbar, of Altoona, who was riding with him, according to hospital authorities. All were taken to the Columbia Hospital by passing motorists.

John McGinnis, 73, of 7543 Susquehanna street, suffered probable internal injuries when struck by an automobile driven, police said, by Harry Scott, of 7915 Inglebrook place, at Braddock and Swissvale avenues. McGinnis was taken to the Columbia Hospital.

OTHER COLLISIONS

In a collision on the William Penn Highway between Murraysville and Export, Henry Brawley, 18, of Forest Hills, suffered a probable fracture of the skull, and Leo Kitchen, 21, of 1110 Rebecca street, North Braddock, and Joseph Barclay, of Braddock, received severe bruises. Brawley's condition was regarded as serious at the Columbia Hospital.

John P. Joyce and Tom Brokan, both of Pittsburgh, and Sevana Webber, of Morgantown, W. Va., were hurt in an auto collision near Grafton, W. Va., and are in the Grafton Hospital. John S. Keener, of Grafton, driver of the other car, was uninjured.

KNIFE VICTIM NEAR DEATH

Joseph George, 45, of House No. 9, 454 Eighth avenue, West Homestead, today was in a serious condition in the Homestead Hospital from stab wounds in the neck, according to a police report. Peter Ignott, 50, of House 10, 454 Eighth avenue, alleged to have stabbed George with a penknife, was arrested by Motorcycle Patrolman Harold Russell and held in the West Homestead Police Station to await the outcome of the victim's wounds.

Maid Tells Cathie About Farnsworth Men

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Catherine Paige, elder daughter in a fatherless home, secures her first position in the office of Alfred A. Farnsworth, successful engineer. She meets Gordon Moore of the firm of Moore Brothers, engaged in important construction work for Farnsworth. Cathie is instantly attracted to him, and he to her, but what seems a serious love affair to her is just a pleasant episode to him, and she soon realizes he has forgotten her. Cathie's mother falls seriously ill. To pay for hospital expenses and doctor bills she is forced to borrow heavily from Farnsworth. He is many years her senior, and completely overwhelms her when he proposes marriage with him as a way out of her financial difficulties. After a night of tears she accepts and agrees to an early marriage. Her mother believes that though Cathie does not really love Farnsworth, she respects and likes him, and hopes that this will grow into love. An expensive trousseau is purchased and Cathie leaves on her wedding trip. When she returns she is struck by the gloomy, almost sinister quality of Farnsworth's house, which is now to be her home.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XIII.

Cathie breathed again. Chester Farnsworth and his bride weren't going to live with them. They were just coming to visit for a few days. She was ashamed of herself, being so relieved. Only a few moments ago she had been thinking that it was an awfully large house for two people, and at the bare thought of her husband's beloved son coming, she had been on the defensive right away.

"I guess I am tired," she decided before she fell asleep that night. "I'll feel better when I get more used to the house. I wish we didn't have so many servants . . . and that Marguerite! Brr . . . she gives me the creeps. I'm perfectly sure she listens at keyholes, she's just that kind . . . I hope Chester and his wife don't come for a few days . . . I wonder what they'll think finding me here . . . maybe they'll think Mr. Farnsworth shouldn't have married me . . . I've heard about grown children being furious when parents married again . . . and it might be something about money . . . They might think I was going to get what they should have . . . Sometimes I wish I hadn't" But no! She wouldn't wish she hadn't married Mr. Farnsworth. That wouldn't be loyal. She wouldn't wish it, not even to herself.

Breakfast

Chinese Boy Brings It To Room

She woke late. After 9 o'clock. Mr. Farnsworth must have been gone an hour. Pale, wintry sunshine filtered through the closed windows. Someone must have been in to close them, and to light the small fire of pineknots that burned on the hearth. While she was speculating, rather sleepily, on who it could have been, there was a discreet tap and the door opened softly, admitting a young China boy, bearing a breakfast tray.

"Glood morning," he said brightly. "You like eggs soft?"

Cathie nodded, a little abashed by the boy's beady eyes and the consciousness of her tousled hair and flimsy nightdress.

"All light. These soft." He permitted himself a faint triumphal smile, deposited the tray on the table and left.

"Well, I may get used to this eventually!" Cathie thought and grinned as she drank the frosty orange juice and lifted covers to peek at hidden dishes on the charming, yellow-lacquered tray.

What would Ma say if a young Chinese boy should walk into her room and put a breakfast tray on her table the minute she woke up?

Homesick

Loses Little Time in Visiting Mother

Wondering about Ma made her homesick. She had intended to call in style in the afternoon, but she couldn't wait that long. She pushed the tray away and jumped out of bed. The green going-away suit was the first thing she came across, so she put that on, and in 20 minutes she was out of the house and on her way.

It was good to see the little patch of lawn, and the calla lilies still blooming along the side, and everything just the same.

"Ma!" Cathie cried, fairly tumbling up the back steps, flinging open the back door. And there was the warm, sunny kitchen with the geraniums on

McKees Rocks Beer Poured Into River as Car Leaks

DICKERSON RUN, Pa., Sept. 8.—A hundred barrels of beer were poured into the Youghiogheny River by seven prohibition officers who were notified by Pittsburgh and Lake Erie Railroad policemen when a car inspector noticed liquid leaking from the box car which carried a consignment listed as wire.

The car was one of three consigned to McKees Rocks from Philadelphia. The prohibition officers are said to have lost track of them until the railroad employes noticed the fluid oozing from the car. The beer, said to be of 5 per cent, was valued at $10,000.

Only 30 Per Cent of Autos Declared Fit by Club

Only 30 per cent of Allegheny County's 300,000 motor vehicles will pass the required state inspection from September 15 to October 31 without requiring repairs or adjustments, according to George G. Semans, chairman of the Highway Committee of the Pittsburgh Motor Club. He bases this figure on results of the inspection last year.

In addition to the regular tests made each year, the club urged the State Highway Department to include the inspection of tires, as it was pointed out, unsafe tires endanger many lives. The Highway Department refused to act, however, because it was thought that this type of equipment was too expensive.

This inspection was rendered compulsory in 1929.

Pensy Safety Chief To Address Meeting

T. H. Carrow, superintendent of the safety system of the Pennsylvania Railroad, will be the principal speaker at a meeting of the railroad section of the Safety Congress in Pittsburgh September 29 to October 3, it was announced today.

DOWNTOWN BY-PASS ROUTES URGED

MOST TRAFFIC 'THROUGH' IN TRIANGLE

Boy Scouts' Survey Shows 55.6 Per Cent of Travel Doesn't Stop in Section

In announcing results of the Better Traffic Committee's traffic counts made by Boy Scouts in the Triangle Section May 22, Lewis W. McIntyre, city traffic engineer, says that 55.6 per cent of vehicles entering and leaving that district were by-passing, and failing to make a stop.

During the 18-hour period of the count, 54,915 of the 98,813 vehicles entering the downtown section at 17 possible points, did not stop in the Triangle. Commenting on this he said:

"By-pass routes around the Triangle district are the chief solution for Pittsburgh's traffic ills which such figures as 55.6 per cent through traffic will admit. If that much of the traffic congestion of the downtown district were eliminated, our traffic volumes would be similar to those of five or six years ago.

ROUTES PROPOSED

"The chief by-pass routes which have been discussed, and are under consideration by various civic groups interested in traffic betterment, including the Better Traffic Committee, are the improvement of the wharves with the widening of Duquesne way and Water street, the construction of the Liberty Cross-town thoroughfare, the completion of the North Side-West End bridge for the lightening of traffic on Manchester and Point bridges and the completion of the approved traffic circle at Penn, Liberty, Grant and Eleventh as well as the street developments which have been proposed in connection with the erection of the new Federal Building."

SEES NEED OF STUDY

Frank L. Duggan, general chairman of the committee said the committee had estimated there would be 22 per cent through traffic. In view of the actual figure, he declared the situation demands immediate study. He referred to the program for traffic betterment that had been approved at a meeting July 10, which had been planned to culminate either in a request that City Council ban all parking in the downtown district, or that by-pass routes be suggested, should the reports just made warrant such a step.

Three steps proposed in the program were co-operation of Council with Traffic Magistrate W. P. Scost to bring about a more stringent enforcement of traffic regulations, that off-street parking facilities be improved to care for greater volume of parking, and that a complete parking ban be recommended for the Triangle, or that plans be suggested by which through traffic might be by-passed from the central business point should the "origin and destination" count's percentage of such traffic indicate the advisability of such a step.

The Camera Question Box

Today's question: — Should the states have uniform marriage and divorce laws to remedy existing evils?

Carl Wolk

CARL WOLK, shop owner, East End: — Yes, I think so. If the state laws were the same on these questions we would have fewer cases of unhappy marriage and fewer divorces.

Miss Givets

MISS ANN GIVETS, bookkeeper, Squirrel Hill:—They certainly should. If the laws could all be the same then there wouldn't be so many instances of young people running away to get married just for the thrill of running away.

S. P. Bernstein

SYLVAN P. BERNSTEIN, salesman, Pittsburgh: — Absolutely. Then there would be fewer divorces and much less cause for divorce. So many separations are due to hasty decisions and easy laws.

Henry Wolk

HENRY WOLK, shop owner, Pittsburgh:—Yes. If the laws were uniform and more strict there wouldn't be so many people who would be so willing to treat them with such nonchalant disregard.

Miss Wersbe

MISS LENA WERSBE, saleswoman, Oakland: — Yes I think they should. That would do away with all the elopements of the children who are too young to know their own minds and who think they're doing something brilliant.

Nicholas Ditolla

NICHOLAS DITOLLA, meat cutter, East End:—Yes, they should. Many people who can now marry because of the lenient regulations in some states are really too young for marriage and would thus be saved from such a hurried step.

FLAMES SWEEP NATIONAL PARK

Eighteen concessions, a bowling alley and several small amusement places were destroyed by fire at the National Amusement Park, on the Freeport road, near Blawnox, early today. Damage was placed at $25,000. The Guyasuta dog track escaped the flames.

Flames which started in the bowling alley, it was said, spread rapidly to other buildings, all of frame construction, and were visible in Oakmont and Verona.

Firemen from Blawnox summoned help from Sharpsburg, Verona, Aspinwall and Undercliff. A heavy rain, which fell after the firemen arrived on the scene, helped in preventing further spread of the flames.

Traffic in the Freeport road was tied up for more than an hour as persons came from all parts of the Allegheny Valley district to watch the fire.

Fire Chief George Lingle, of Blawnox, said he was unable to learn the cause of the fire.

BOY, 9, DIES AFTER CRASH

City detectives and police today were investigating circumstances surrounding the death of Jacob Schroepfer, 9, of 128 Pius street, South Side, who died last night from injuries suffered in an automobile accident.

A checkup was being made, they said, to ascertain the identity of a woman, who, witnesses say, was driving the automobile into which Schroepfer and his brother, Rudolph, 17, riding a bicycle, crashed at South Eighteenth street and Monastary avenue, late yesterday.

Witnesses told police the boys, riding in the same direction as the automobile, bumped into the back fender, fell from their wheel, got up, and then went home. The driver, police were told, assisted the boys and promised to call at their homes later to learn of their condition. She failed to put in an appearance.

Jacob was stricken after his return home and was sent to South Side Hospital, where, physicians said, died from a fractured skull. Police say the license on the car, Pennsylvania 58D4, was issued to W. H. Huffong, of Marion, Franklin County.

"Cathie!"

Down went the egg beater with a clatter. Mary Paige opened her arms wide, to enfold her child to her heart, and laugh, and cry, and bombard her with questions.

Questions
Her Mother and Sister Are Inquisitive

"But where's the car?" Jean demanded when she came in to lunch. "Why, Cathie, why didn't you bring your car?"

"Yes, why didn't you?" Mary Paige asked.

"And what was it like in Mexico, and did you play the gambling machines? And did you see the races? And Cathie, is it true that it costs $6 for dinner at some of those swell hotels, Cathie? Cathie, did you get any new clothes? Gee, Cathie, if it was me I would. I wouldn't be wearing my going-away dress now if I had all your money, Cath. I'd have a new one!"

"Now that's enough from you, Miss!" Ma said tartly, but afterwards she told Cathie, "That suit needs pressing. You could do with another to keep them both fresh. A rich man's wife like you!"

Cathie could have cried. It wasn't the same any more. She couldn't explain it, but she felt it. Ma was as darling as ever, but she kept reminding her that she was married—and rich. She wouldn't even let her wash the dishes after lunch. "No, Cathie, don't be foolish . . . now move away. What would Mr. Farnsworth say? Spoiling your hands!"

And before Ruth could be back from school she shooed her home. Mr. Farnsworth might come home from the office early and find her gone. She ought to be there, waiting.

So Cathie started back, before she had said any of the things she wanted to say, before she wanted to go. Mrs. Hennessy rapped on the window as she passed and waved a gnarled hand, then vanished behind the lace curtains. Cathie knew what she was thinking . . "Ha, Cathie Paige may have a wed-license, but my Lillian has her own motor car," and she knew that Ma was sorry that she hadn't come in the big blue car, with Everett driving, just to show old Mrs. Hennessy.

"I'll come in the car next time," she thought . . . "I'm glad I really like Mr Farnsworth, I mean Alfred . . . because it isn't such fun to be rich. It makes you too lonely."

News
Maid Tells Cathie About Farnsworth Men

That evening a queer thing happened. She had gone to her room to dress. There was a faint tap at the door, and then it opened slowly. The woman, Marguerite, stood there. "I may as well help you, since he's too tight to get you a proper maid," she said sullenly.

When Cathie drew back involuntarily, clutching her dressing gown tight about her, the woman drew nearer and pressed her into the chair before the dressing table on which gleamed the silver and blue bottles, and the turquoise backed brushes and mirrors.

"Sit down," she said almost roughly, "I won't hurt you. I can do as well as any lady's maid. I did it for her . . . the first lady, and she was no easy one to please."

While Cathie still hesitated, startled by her strange look and the growing certainty that the woman had been watching her, not only now, but perhaps many times before through the keyhole, she brought her white, seamed face nearer and touched Cathie's bare shoulder with a strange, caressing motion. "You needn't be afraid," she said in a whisper, "the Farnsworth ladies have all been true blue, and I see you're another."

She picked up the brush and began to brush Cathie's hair with long, rhymical strokes.

Something outside herself, something that she could not seem to control, put the words into Cathie's mouth:

"And the Farnsworth men, aren't they true blue, too?"

"Three generations I've known," the woman said softly, "and one's no better than the other."

GETAWAY AUTO LOCATED IN HOMESTEAD

State Police Hold Three Men, One Confessing to Tri-State District Thefts

Following a hearing in Central Police Court today, four men, two of them ex-convicts, according to police, were held for further investigation in connection with the holdup last Friday of the Cruikshank Brothers Company $3,500 payroll. The quartet was arrested yesterday.

Francis Bradshaw, credit manager of the company, carrying the payroll, made partial identification of the suspects at the hearing.

An automobile used by the men, whom Bradshaw says slugged him at Preble and Island avenues, was recovered in a Homestead garage, police reported.

The owner of the car, Steve Bukovacki, 27, of 2162 Straubs lane, was arrested after he admitted lending the car to one of the suspects, according to detectives.

WOMAN INVOLVED

On the trail of the bandit trio for 18 hours, Detectives Thomas Morgan, Walter Monaghan, Edward Schindel and Robert Marshall arrested Louis Eskra, 24, of 1316 Tell street, known to police as "Dutch Louie," on Brown's Bridge, when he went to meet a woman, it was reported. The woman, Eskra's sweetheart, whose identity detectives refused to divulge, made a date with him after being ordered to do so by detectives, it was said.

Several hours later the sleuths arrested Tim O'Brien, 25, and Steve Ducko, 22, in a dwelling in East Eighth avenue, Homestead. The alleged bandit car was found in a garage behind the house, detectives said.

Eskra and O'Brien, former convicts, were partially identified by Bradshaw.

Operations of an alleged bandit gang were believed at an end today by state police who were holding three men, one of whom when captured here last night confessed, according to police, to 16 holdups in Washington, Pa., and almost two score in West Virginia and Ohio.

Under Sergt. Frank Gleason, a detail of state police from Washington came to Pittsburgh early yesterday in search of John Hoyt, alias Robert Leonard, 24, alleged leader of the gang, after learning of his arrival here from Wheeling.

HIGHWAYS WATCHED

Bridges and roads leading into the city, as well as freight yards and railroad stations were watched by troopers and detectives.

They were about to give up the search last night when an automobile traveling in West Carson street was stopped. In it were found Hoyt and three other men. Hoyt was taken to Washington while the other three were released after questioning.

Search for Hoyt was instituted following the arrests of Grant Cutlip, 30, and Clinton Winfield, 35, as bandit suspects.

CHARGED WITH HOLDUPS

Police blamed the trio for 16 stickups in Washington during the last nine months and about 40 others in West Virginia and Ohio towns.

Asked by Sergt. Gleason approximately how many holdups had been perpetrated by his gang, Hoyt replied:

"Fifty or more, I guess."

CRACKS PERIL FOREST HILLS DWELLINGS

Cellar Openings Develop After Rain Loosens Hillside Excavation

Three families were forced to flee from their homes in Avenue A, Forest Hills, early today when fissures were discovered in their cellars and in the earth in front of their houses, where part of a hillside is being cut away for a new road, police said.

James Worthington, of 118 Avenue A, Forest Hills, discovered the concrete floor in his cellar broken in several places shortly after midnight, he told Police Chief Cecil Lowell.

FINDS FISSURE

Upon further investigation, he said, he found a fissure in the earth in front of his house. Worthington then aroused his neighbors, T. C. Roantree, of 116 Avenue A, and William Barr, of 120 Avenue A.

All three families spent the night with neighbors. It was thought that the rainfall loosened the earth where a cut had been made for the new roadway.

SAFETY MEASURES

Chief Lowell notified men who are working on the roadway, and they were busy for several hours in the heavy rain, filling the fissures with concrete, and bracing the houses with timbers.

RADIO SINGER WITH MARINES

Helen Maree Greenwood, the soprano who sang in the recent Westinghouse Salute over Station KDKA, will appear as an added attraction for the concerts which the United States Marine Band is to give in the Syria Mosque on Thursday afternoon and evening.

Miss Greenwood comes to Pittsburgh to sing in the concerts because the Rotarians are sponsoring them for the benefit of the crippled children and the Boys' Home.

Miss Greenwood will be accompanied both in the afternoon and evening by Miss Helen Machette.

HELD AS POLICE SIFT 'KILLING'

South Side police are holding Horace Chapman, 32, Negro, of Buzzard Roost, Knoxville, Tenn., while they verify the story that he is wanted in Tennessee for killing a Negro boy.

Chapman and Wilbur Cummings, 29, Negro, of Aliquippa, were arrested on the charge of stealing an auto after a wild chase from the South Side to Hays, where police say he tore down 100 feet of fence and plunged into Baldwin Creek when he lost control of the car.

Mike Falie, of 580 Mifflin street, who caught Chapman and held him until the police arrived, was severely bitten on the right arm, police say.

COUPLE STAGE STREET DUEL

B. Dagnes, 25, Negro, of 637 Francis street, and his wife, Mabel, 24, must explain in Center Avenue Police court today why, according to police, they stood across the street from each other and conducted a pistol duel.

Dagnes told police he struck a lamp post while driving his auto near his home, and that his wife became angry because he would not report the accident to police.

Mrs. Dagnes got a gun and chased him out of the house, he said. He ran across the street, and when she continued to fire from their door step, he returned the shots, according to his story.

Police said the wife held their two-weeks-old infant in her arms during the exchange of shots.

DITHRICH HEARS FIRST CASE

Judge W. Heber Dithrich, former county solicitor, who took his oath of office Saturday, received his first assignment as a jurist in Common Pleas Court this morning.

He will hear the suit of John Miller, of Coraopolis, against the Pennsylvania Railroad. Miller alleges he was injured in a fall from a train. Judge Dithrich also is from Coraopolis.

Proceedings in Criminal Court were resumed today following the summer recess. There are seven judges in the court and with the exception of the presiding judge, George V. Moore, all were new faces.

Three of the judges are visiting. They are Judges William G. Thomas, of Carbon county; James M. Barnett, of Perry county, and John S. Fine, of Luzerne county. The local judges who are new in Criminal Court are Samuel H. Gardner, former district attorney; William H. McNaugher, sworn in Saturday, and Sylvester J. Snee, of County Court.

$233 Safe Theft Laid to Employe

Accused of taking $233 from the safe of Garvin's restaurant at 826 Liberty avenue, James Nicholson, 23, Negro, of 618 Perry street, was turned over to city detectives for questioning following a hearing before Magistrate Leo Rothenberg in Central Police Court today.

Nicholson, a porter at the restaurant, was charged by D. M. Garvin with having taken the money.

Playlot Activities To be Discussed

Playground activities and other matters pertaining to the welfare of the community will be discussed tonight at the meeting of the Brookline Board of Trade. The meeting, scheduled for 8 o'clock, will be held in Brookline Public School, Woodburn and Pioneer avenues.

Oakland Board Meets Tomorrow

The Oakland Board of Trade will meet tomorrow night in its monthly session at the Hotel Schenley. Copies of the revised by-laws are being distributed to members.

GADGET SPEEDS DICTATION

The notebook and pencil, long the piece de resistance of the enterprising stenographer, may soon be relegated to the discard. A machine has recently been perfected which experts claim will enable the stenographer to take a faster and more detailed dictation.

The machine, built along the lines of a portable typewriter, records dictation by symbols. These marks may be read at any later date by anyone, whether experienced or not, according to the experts.

According to officials of the Boyd Business College, where the machines are being tried, the operator may take dictation at the rate of 125 to more than 150 words per minute, much faster than with the use of the notebook and pencil.

Deputy Administrator H. D. (Three-Gun) Wilson today started turning over government property under his jurisdiction in the Pittsburgh district to Robert Krause, head of the prohibition investigating unit. He will be acting deputy administrator, pending appointment of a successor to Wilson.

Wilson, it is understood, will remain in Pittsburgh until instructions arrive from Commissioner of Prohibition Amos W. W. Woodcock, to proceed to Wilmington, Del.

FIRE DESTROYS OLIVE OIL

A large quantity of imported olive oil was destroyed in the fire and explosion which damaged the three-story brick building at 1214 Penn avenue, occupied by James Esposito.

The fire started in Esposito's store on the first floor. Firemen said the explosion occurred after the blaze had spread to the rear of the store.

Esposito and his family occupied the second and third floors as their living quarters, but police said they were not at home when the fire broke out.

Firemen donned gas masks and searched the upper floors after the explosion, fearing someone might have been trapped there. Battalion Chief George Spahr estimated the damage at $5,000.

The blast occurred after the firemen reached the scene. No cause has yet been established for the fire or the explosion.

Josephine Ormsby Nicola Becomes Bride Of D. M. Gilmore

Overshadowing all other social events of the early part of the week is the wedding today of Josephine Ormsby Nicola, daughter of the Oliver P. Nicolas, of the Schenley Apartments, who is being married to David Meade Gilmore, son of the Edward Gilmores, of Sewickley, this afternoon at 5:30 o'clock.

The setting for the ceremony will be the rose garden of the Lewis A. Parks, Sewickley Heights home. Huge colorful vases with asters, petunias and other vivid autumnal flowers against a background of foliage.

After the ceremony and a small reception at the Allegheny Country Club Mr. Gilmore and his bride will sail for New York and will sail tomorrow for a tour of France and England.

Last night the Alexander L. Robinsons entertained with a buffet supper at their home and yesterday George R. Hann of Sewickley gave a luncheon for the bridal pair. The rehearsal dinner was given Saturday evening by the Lewis A. Parks and a luncheon was given Saturday by the Leslie W. Youngs.

As long as this glorious cool, yet sunny, weather lasts, some folks will be reluctant to abandon the playgrounds of society folks of the good old summer time. So there's still interesting news from the resorts even though many folks are returning home.

Stay at Resorts

Among those still tarrying at summer homes are Dr. and Mrs. Ogden M. Edwards who are at their summer place at East Hampton. Saturday evening Dr. Edwards, who's commodore of the Devon Yacht Club and Mrs. Edwards entertained a group of 25 friends at a dinner at the clubhouse.

Returning today from New York are Dr. and Mrs. Robert Milligan and their debutante daughter Peggy. They arrived a few days ago on their yacht from Watch Hill.

MRS. J. M. STEIM

First Year Book Issued By Junior Auxiliary Of Carnegie Club

The very first year book of the Junior Auxiliary to the Carnegie Woman's Club has made its appearance and a neat, compact and comprehensive booklet it is, too. One of its early pages gives the roster of officers: President, Miss Emily H. Wilson; vice president, Miss Myrtle McKowan; recording secretary, Miss Marian Holmes; coresponding secretary, Miss Vernadean Webb; treasurer, Miss Charlotte Wilson; honorary advisor, Mrs. W. A. K. Clarke; advisors, Mrs. L. B. Worley and Mrs. J. W. Rehling; directors, Miss Annabel Nelly, Miss Helen Millar, Miss Naomi Marxen, Miss Anne Wegener and Miss Frances Russell.

A little farther on come the program announcements with their promise of entertainment and profit for the season. President's Day is September 16 under the leadership of Miss Millar. Miss Wilson will make her inaugural address. Miss Pearl O. Weston will present the year book and Mrs. Clarke, a past president of the seniors, will give a history of the older organization. Miss Elvera Hamstrom will give a travel talk in October. Miss Helen Willitts will discuss the modern drama and a one-act play will be given at the November meeting and Christmas in other lands will be discussed by various members at the Yule session.

In the new year comes a program on current topics from the United States, Europe and Asia, then a discussion of women in business, professions, politics and social service. A dinner at the Methodist Church on March 17, when the members, according to the year book, will be "appearing at our best" will have Miss Margaret Sloan, of the Joseph Horne Company, as speaker. American sculpture and American painting are April's twin topics. May will have Miss Miriam Schonfield, of the Congress of Clubs, telling how to "Be Yourself" and in-between times will find a number of specty events, as yet undated—a benefit bridge at the Elks' Hall, a stunt party at Chartiers Country Club, a valentine party at the United Presbyterian Church, a bridge party in American Legion Hall and a mothers' party at the Presbyterian Church.

The girls will meet the third Tuesday evening of each month in the Y. W. C. A.

SMART PARISIANS FIND NEW BERETS IRRESISTIBLY CHIC

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Sept. 8.—Winter snows will not bury the beret, for in a more sophisticated form, it is to glorify the coming season. Many women found the pert beret irresistibly chic and becoming and so, for what reason should such a comfortable cap be relegated to the millinery scrap heap of discarded modes? Besides, the beret is more than comfortable when worn with a huge fur collar and it can be given a sophisticated air with subtle drapings and twists, to render it more suitable to the luxuriousness of winter clothes. The wide-brimmed hat is also another hold-over from from the summer and the woman who yearns for a wide black velvet hat can now gratify that yearning without being dubbed demode, as has been the lot of some women who have clung to this type of headgear despite the vagaries or demands of the mode. Despite their dimensions, however, this season's large velvet hats avoid any hint of the cumbersome or clumsy. This is because they are not over-trimmed. Size is sightly when treated with simplicity.

BOTH OF THE HATS shown here are from Madame Jose, who is having great success this year with all types of headgear. The clever little beret is of broadcloth formed of parallel strips of the fabric stitched side to side with pointed ends which edge the face in youthful and most becoming manner. These berets are made in any color and usually are ordered to match the accessories of a costume. The wide-brimmed hat is of soft, fine felt with twisted velvet ribbon in turquoise. At the front the brim is cut away from the crown and placed high above it. A swirl of turquoise ribbon is placed under the brim at the left temple.

THE CHARMING EVENING FROCK is from Nicole Groult's new collection. It is of beige faille with a close V decollete bodice and a very wide, long-all-around skirt. The sash with its dashing bow is of jade green velvet. The group of horizontal folds placed midway down the skirt accent its flaring lines.

Alphonse's Snooping Ways Makes Raquel Angry

CHAPTER XLVII

For three nights in succession Raquel went to the opera with Alphonse.

She sang now only for the night and its song.

On the fourth night Alphonse had to attend to important business. Her disappointment was keen. She remained in her rooms at the hotel. At 11 o'clock she was preparing to retire when the telephone rang.

"Don't tell me you've had a quarrel, dearie," Greta called. "He got everything that was in a sardine tin into Montmartre."

"But you're late, Raquel pleaded. "You had to hurry for Greta's benefit as tonight."

"What do you mean, late? It's only 11. It's still a little early."

"Yes, and I'm just about to retire for the night."

"Sa-ay, you're funny! Isn't it, you? What do you think you are? This is Paris, not the morgue."

Raquel, rather than have the maid bring some one into her room. Funny how Lola always happened to be within listening distance when she was holding conversation with anyone here on the telephone.

"If you'll excuse me tonight," she said to Greta, "I'm really tired. Shopping all day trying new models."

"I know. My feet are worn down to the ankles. That's why I'm taking 'em out for a rest. Come on, now, dearie,—be a help. Will you?" I got a boy friend who wants to get rid of a bulge in his bank roll. He's a pal of Bertie Adams. And Bertie's coming too.

Raquel Consents

Greta really wanted her to accept. Raquel could tell it in Greta's voice. Well then she must go. Greta was her confidante, her one friend without benefit of gain. The boyish girl with the mischievous mind had a sincere liking and unmistakable loyalty for her. She must return it in kind.

"Very well," she said. "I'll be ready if you'll call in 15 minutes."

"Atta girl. The fireman's bride," cried Greta with relief.

When Raquel turned from the telephone Lola the maid was close to her elbow. She bit off the sharp rebuke she wanted to make.

"I'll want evening things," she ordered sharply.

"Mademoiselle is going out?" It was a protest.

"Yes."

"If Mademoiselle will tell me where she intends going I shall know what is best to select." The oily glibness of Lola's tongue!

"You'll find a gown of black net in that second closet. An extremely plain gown. That will do very well."

Lola's long pointed nose poked about the silken rainbow in the closet until she found the black net.

"Perhaps Mademoiselle will find it too plain, if she is going to a gay place," she suggested, slipping the gown over Raquel's head.

Maid Follows

Her inquisitiveness brought no answer. She stood back, her nose twitching like that of a bothered rabbit.

"Mademoiselle has an eye for what becomes her best," she treacled.

"The black wrap with the silver ruff, please," said Raquel, ignoring Lola's obvious attempt to divert suspicion from her prying.

Only Greta was waiting for her in the open corridor outside the lobby of the Continental when she went down.

"I knew old Nosey would be mooching around trying to get an eyeful." Greta explained. "So I made Bertie and Ginger Smith—honest, his name's Smith—wait for us at the St. James."

"You mean Lola would watch us?"

"And how! Don't turn around, but she blew in, behind the pillars by the elevator. She must have slid down seven flights of stairs."

"How does she dare?" Flares in black eyes. The flash of blue-white teeth.

Hold it," warned Greta. "Why get yourself into an uproar? We'll give old Nosey a treat. Wander out and park outdoors in a taxi like we are all under in the world. I'll tell the driver where to go after we get under way. Then Nosey'll snip the chatter a fistful of francs for the news and all she'll draw will be a blank."

As the taxi turned the corner of the street Raquel looked back. A woman was talking with the chatter under the street arch in front of the hotel. Lola, the maid.

Learns About Calls

Bertie Adams and the man Greta called Ginger were waiting for them in the St. James. A rotund, genial fellow was Sandy, with a crop of bright red hair that kinked stubbornly up from his brow and a spattering of freckles that would do credit to a juvenile motion-picture comedian.

"Come on," heralded Greta eagerly, as always, to be on the wing. "We're off in a cloud of dust."

"It's great to see you again," Bertie told Raquel, when they were once more bowling along the boulevards. "I thought you had changed your mind about being friends."

"Why did you think that?" asked Raquel suddenly suspicious. She had done nothing to make Bertie reach such a conclusion.

"I've telephoned your hotel at least a dozen times and never had any luck. And I've left messages."

"Oh—h." She would not let him know that neither his calls nor his messages had reached her. "I've been working all day, and going to the opera at night. I'm sorry."

He knew. Her eyes burned against the lids when she closed them to shut out their flashing indignation. That Alphonse should do this thing to her! Surround her with spies. Cut her off from pleasure, from the world, as if she were his chattel. That he'd dare rob her of her precious freedom!

Round of Pleasure

Alphonse must stop it. She would see that he did. Her throat was so tight she could not manage the meaningless nothings with which she wanted to cover her chagrin, her mounting anger.

"Here we are," called Ginger Smith. "First hop. All out."

They had wound through narrow streets toward the top of a hill. Lights winked. There was a canopy over the sidewalk to the curb. A cossack at the door. An alien country. A strange city. A Club Divine. All over the face of the earth people played the same games in the same way. Wherever they went, wealth and pleasure created their own playgrounds. By a pattern.

No sooner were they settled in one of these jazz-mad places, it seemed to Raquel, than they were off for another. Cut from the same pattern. Varying so little that one scarcely knew one had moved. Another name, another waiter in another guise. The same faces. The same rattle of drums and moan of saxophones, the same tunes.

It was 3 o'clock in the morning when they entered the jazz palace of a bronze-skinned Queen of Clubs who learned to express the emotional frenzy of the modern jungle when, as a child, she did the levee dances on the banks of the Mississippi down Natchez way.

DEAR OLD DUCK, HE IS ABSOLUTELY BROKE TODAY!
MANAGER
FAY KING

By FAY KING

When Miss Keys announced at the office that she was going to be married and retire from her business career, the Boss nearly passed out of the picture.

How could he ever get along without this most pleasant and most capable young woman? She was always so cheery, and no one knew better how to handle the Boss when he was in one of his grouchy moods.

He never worried about breaking engagements when he had a sudden change of mind. She always managed these things for him so perfectly.

In two years she came back to the office. Her marriage was a flop!

If she had hindled her home duties half as well as her office routine, her marriage would have been a success!

Love's Reawakening

Continuation of Loves Awakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Madge Is Deeply Affected by Glimpse of Meeting

How I ever got out of Robert Savarin's room without betraying the absolute panic which had seized me as I began to realize what my promise to him involved, I do not know. But once outside his door I stood breathless, shaking for a long minute before I could school myself to the calmness which I knew I must bring to Lillian's aid for the meeting with Robert Savarin.

But when I finally went down the stairs to the sitting-room where I had left Lillian with Robert Savarin's sister, my face was controlled and there was no tremor in my voice. But I caught a quick, bright glance from Mrs. Cosgrove which told me that she knew of the ordeal I had been through and that her sympathies were with me.

Even while I turned toward Lillian I mentally saluted this unselfish sister of Robert Savarin's. There were not many women I told myself, who could see a fortune willed away from them, even though they themselves were being given a similar one.

Lillian stood up as I entered, drawing her coat more closely around her.

"I've tried to make her take that coat off," Mrs. Cosgrove said worriedly, "but she wouldn't."

"I can't," Lillian said with an appealing look at me. "I'm cold."

"It's so warm in Robert's room, I'm afraid," Mrs. Cosgrove began.

"I'll see that she takes it off up there," I promised, with the knowledge that I could indeed keep that pledge, for I knew that Lillian was keeping on the coat only to conceal the dress beneath it, utterly unsuited to the occasion, but which she had donned because it was the gown which Robert Savarin had loved best.

"Am I to come now?" Lillian asked, and I nodded as I took her arm.

"Will you come back down here?" Mrs. Cosgrove asked me, but I shook my head as I caught a glance of quick appeal from Lillian.

"I'll stay upstairs, wherever Lillian wants me," I said, and Mrs. Cosgrove nodded approval.

"That will be best," she said. "I'll wait for you here."

Lillian did not speak again until we had reached the top of the stairs.

"Will you wait just outside the door?" she whispered, and again I nodded.

"I fancy you know," she murmured, "that I'd rather have you with me, but of course, Robert——"

"You must talk to him alone, of course," I said firmly, but in equally low tones. "But Robert himself asked me to bring you to him, so I will be with you the first minute or two of your interview."

"Oh, I'm so glad," she breathed, and then we were outside the door of Robert Savarin's room. The nurse had whispered to me before I left that I was not to rap when I came back with Lillian, but was to wait her summons to us, so we stood quietly at one side of the door that the sick man's vision might not inclose us when the nurse came out.

It seemed hours that we stood there, Lillian's hand tightly clasping mine, and our ears strained to catch any sound from the sick room. Lillian had unfastened her cloak and thrown it back so that a single movement would throw it aside when she should come into the room. I looked at her furtively, at the feverish brilliance of her eyes and the crimson flush of excitement relieving her pallor, and decided that I never had seen her look more regally beautiful in spite of her years and silver hair.

The door opened softly and the nurse came out. She did not speak but held the door open that we might pass through. Lillian caught at my arm with hands that were shaking violently.

"Steady, dearest," I whispered and added the slogan which I knew could not help but rouse her. "You must not fail Robert now."

I felt her body stiffen and her hands grow quiet.

"Thank you," she said meaningly, and when we went into the room where Robert Savarin with all his heart in his eyes was watching for her coming.

With her hand in mine, when she had thrown off her cloak I walked across the room, meaning to place it in Robert's as he had asked me to do. But with a hoarse little cry of "Lillian! My love!" the sick man raised himself on his pillows and extended both arms in longing towards her.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Tuesday, September 9

A day of rather disquieting and unsettled state of affairs is the prognostic based on the lunar transits in power. Papers and writings may give concern and a generally adverse and trying situation may arise, which it will be difficult to compose. It would be wise to postpone activities where possible, keeping an eye alert for treachery and falsehood and duplicity.

Those whose birthday it is may prepare for a year in which many frustrating and delaying influences may be encountered. It is admonished that attention be directed to routine affairs, postponing large adventures, but keeping alert against fraud, deception and slander.

A child born on this day may be quick and clever, but may have to work hard for any success it may wrest against stubborn obstacles. It should be fitted for this by education and training.

Teething

When baby is teething and his stomach refuses to hold even milk, beat up the white of an egg until stiff, add a few drops of orange juice and a little bit of sugar to make it palatable and feed it to him with a spoon. It is very strengthening and forms a coating on the stomach which will help to keep down stronger foods.

Domesticity, like olives, is becoming an acquired taste. In some cases, it takes several years for a woman to get used to a husband—and in others, it takes several husbands for a woman to get used to matrimony.

Most marriages will continue to be failures, so long as the average man spends his time looking for a lovable woman, instead of for a "livable" woman.

A man only chuckles indulgently, when you mention his sins or his vices; but, unless you want to incur his undying hatred, beware of reminding him of his foolish mistakes.

Some of the saddest cases, since the fall of the stock market, are those of the people who have to do without trips to Europe and worry along with only one car.

CORRECT MANNERS

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Returning Photographs

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

About a year and a half ago I was very friendly with a certain young lady and in the course of our friendship we exchanged gifts more or less permanent in their nature. Included among these was a framed photograph of myself. Although there is no animosity between us, we never see one another any more—in fact we never shall. Should these gifts be returned? Should the photograph be returned? (As a matter of fact I am rather keen that it should be). Could I ask for it? E. L.

This wouldn't, I feel, be a very gallant or courtly thing for a gentleman to do, and I wouldn't like to have you do it. It is one thing for a girl to make this suggestion, but quite another, obviously, for a man to make it. Even if you are anxious to have your photograph back, and even if you would consider that it would be better to have the presents returned on both sides, it would be mighty awkward for you to have the suggestion come from you. It would be better—don't you think?—to let well enough alone. As long as there is no animosity now between you, it would be wiser to maintain this status.

After the Dance

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1. We are two young girls who attended our first dinner dance the other evening. We did not ask the young men in when they brought us home. Since then we have been discussing whether it was correct to have asked them in our house. (This was the first time we had been out with these young men.) A says that it was not correct to ask them in and I think we should have.

2. What should one say to the patrons and advisors at a dance? S AND S.

1. I agree with A!

2. Thank them for the "happy time" that you have had, and say how delighted you were to come to the party.

Dining Car Problems

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1. When eating on the train in the dining car, you have to write your order, but do you write the price also after your order, as it is on the menu?

2. When through eating do you call the waiter to pay him, or do you just wait for him to come himself?

M. K.

1. No. The head-waiter of the dining car comes to your table when you have finished, takes the order that is left there by the waiter, and adds the amount.

2. There usually isn't any reason for summoning the waiter, for he appears at such frequent intervals.

Household Hints

After washing milk bottles, do not stand them upside down to drain. Let them stand in their natural position and let the air circulate and dry them. It will keep them much more sweet and fresh.

If the clothes wringer is kept well oiled it will not be so much of a task to operate. Use the machine oil you are accustomed to using for your sewing machine.

TELL IT TO SALLY

By SALLY MARTIN

Is Self-Confidence the Secret of Success?

Is it enough to say "I believe in myself! I know that I'm going to win! Nothing can stop me!" will that formula land you on top of the ladder?

Perry says it will. He believes in himself—and how! And he's sure that because of his self-confidence, he has the world by the tail. Do you agree with him? Or is Perry, in that classic western phrase, "just breeding a scab on his nose?"

Listen—then send us your vote.

Dear Miss Martin:—

I've been reading your column, and I would like to ask your opinion about something I have in mind.

And what is this something? It's the question of self-confidence, and how much you can do if you have plenty of it.

Do you think that a person who has an abundance of it is bound to succeed in life, or don't you? You see I have selected a vocation in which I have been deeply interested for a long time, and since I do have such a strong belief in myself, I don't think that anything in the world can stop me from being a success at it.

But some people are telling me I'm wrong. They say that I have set my ideals too high, and that my head is no less than lost in the clouds.

Of course others have agreed with me that my self-confidence is bound to win. Educated men have told me that an inferiority complex is the worst drawback that anyone could have. That if you want to get anywhere, you have to believe yourself capable of surpassing other people. And I, for one, firmly believe this. And I believe that I can surpass them. Don't you think that makes my winning out a sure thing?

I'm positive that it does. Especially in view of the fact that several times in the past I have put things over, in spite of a lot of jealousy and opposition, because I believed that I could. What do you say to that?

Would you mind giving me your viewpoint on the whole thing? I know you've seen a lot of life, and I'm curious to know what you think. If your opinion coincides with mine, I shall be very happy to know that we think alike. If not, I shall only have to contradict you, because I know that I shall win, say what you may.

I'll be looking every day for your answer. PERRY.

Well brother, if you're so all-fired sure, why do you care what I think?

Do I believe that 100 per cent confidence in yourself will put you across with a bang.

I'll have to answer that with another question. What else have you beside confidence? Have you ever set down and put it up to yourself, straight . . . ask yourself why am I confident? Just exactly what are my talents and abilities? And just exactly what faults do I have to look out for?

Self confidence is a mighty force. None of us can get very far if we haven't our share of it. It frees our minds of worries and hampering fears, and leaves our energies alive and vigorous. But it can't perform miracles. We can't lift thousand-pound weights or write noble poems, just because we think we can. Confidence to be worth anything, must be based on something besides a wish. And if we set ourselves tasks that are beyond our ability to accomplish, we not only are courting bitter disappointment, but confidence itself is apt to be badly dented. And then we're apt to decide that life's a washout and we're failures—not because confidence gypped us, but because we didn't give confidence a square deal.

So be very sure, Perry, that what you do is within your power to do. If it is, then go to it—and more power to you!

But that isn't all, son. There's another catch in this Confidence-in-Yourself business that you'll have to watch out for if you want to really succeed.

And what's that? It's the effect that too much self-confidence has on the other fellow. Too much self-confidence is bound to affront and repel people. It affronts and repels them because all too often it looks like just so much conceit. And conceit is not a sign of intelligence. It is a sign that you're still damp behind the ears—and it bores and irritates sensible people. And no matter how sure you may be of yourself, you can't get along without the friendliness and help of other people, Perry.

You may have all the skill of Benvenuto Cellini, and all the force and drive of Napoleon, but when you boil this success business down to brass tacks, it depends a lot more than you may want to admit on how well you sell yourself to other folks. And if you give them the impression that you're stuck on yourself, or high-hatting them, or trying to push them off the map, you'll find yourself dragging a ball and chain that'll put a serious crimp in your career.

So look out for this idea that you can "surpass other people." Maybe you can. Maybe you are the Million Dollar Kid, and then some. But don't go around shouting it from the housetops. Saw wood, and let people find out for themselves how wonderful you are.

Think these things over. Size yourself up. Then, if you feel that you do rate a million, crash into it! And here's luck to you!

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Dressing tables are cluttered up with eye shadows. The eye shadow is the daughter of the lipstick, which has almost gone into retirement. Little dollies must have some sort of face paint to play with—so smears for the eyelids are in high favor. Blue and blue-purple for blondes, tans and browns for the black-eyed beauties, and greens that shade into blues are the favorite bets of the betwixt-and-between girls with dark eyes and fair hair, or those with light eyes and hair of medium tone. Before eye shadowing oil the eyelids. A nice glisten makes the eyes look mysterious and alluring.

Some of the simple babies put a little black period mark in the far corner of the eyelid. They use an eyelash pencil. It is bad business. Always there is a bit of moisture on the lids, and the result after an hour or so resembles a mud spot. These are the days of fastidious neatness, smudged eyes do not belong.

The glorious crown should be shampooed every two weeks. If the air is sooty or dusty the shampoo should be given oftener than that. Oil and atmospheric filth do not add to the health or contentment of the brain thatch. Shampooing does no harm if the scalp is massaged and the hair dried quickly. If the tresses are extremely dry, a small quantity of liquid vaseline—it comes in a tube—should be rubbed into the scalp.

Some eyebrows get wild. Single hairs break away from the pack and go waving in the air. These should be clipped and brilliantine should be applied with a stiff little brush, training each little hair to go where it should, in line with its neighbors. When eyebrows are arched it is usually best to thin the growth out from the underline, though all scattered, wayward hairs should be tweezered out.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Health—The Passport to Everything Worth While

What do you suppose William the Conqueror said when he was at the height of his fame and kingly glory? That he would gladly surrender his crown and kingdom — for what?

DR. COPELAND

"To know again peace of mind, the love of a true friend, or the innocent sleep of a child."

Why envy a king?

With good health, no matter how thin your purse may be, you can have peace of mind, the respect of your neighbors and enjoy the innocent sleep of a child. Your mind will operate normally if it is enthroned in a well nourished brain. You will have good nature and a friendly disposition if your digestion is what it should be. You will sleep like a babe if your body and mind are normal.

After all, it is not a crown, jewels or palaces that bring contentment. To serve your fellow men and to have the vigor to serve well—what better career can be had by any one of us? No matter how humble the station, vigorous health will make you happy in it.

I often think of the poverty-stricken multitudes in this great world. It takes the edge off happiness to think of their misery. Yet the slums of great cities attract me. In every part of the world I have visited them. It makes me shiver to recall some of the sights I have witnessed.

But, after all, it is not the barrenness of the sunless quarters; it is not the filth and dirt; It is not the scant supply of food—it is not these things that send the dagger of pity into the heart of the visitor. It is the effect of these conditions upon the health of the unfortunate victims of poverty and unemployment—that is what makes slum life so dreadful.

No matter how many of the luxuries you are denied, if you can get the essential food and sleep in the fresh air you can snap your fingers at fate. Fortune cannot long resist red blood and glorious health.

The first step towards "good luck," as it is called, is to have health, with the vigor and good nature that go with it. It is a passport to everything worthwhile in life.

William conquered England, but at the last lost everything he longed to possess. You may have what the Conqueror missed.

MY 50 YEARS IN BASEBALL

by CONNIE MACK
MANAGER OF WORLD CHAMPION PHILADELPHIA ATHLETICS

INSTALLMENT NO. 1.

My family name is McGillicuddy and I was christened Cornelius because there must always be a Cornelius in the male line of the McGillicuddy clan that sprang in County Kildare, Ireland, and sent so many of its sons and daughters across the Atlantic to the land of opportunity.

I am better known as Connie Mack because in my native village of East Brookfield, Mass., my father and mother in ordinary relations dropped the name McGillicuddy as cumbersome and abridged it to Mack and only when my father went to the polling booths to vote or sign a legal paper did he use our proper family name.

The name Mack fitted in a box score of a ball game much snugger than the other, so I did not enlighten players or writers once I got a footing in the major leagues.

It was in 1895 that I came to New York with the Pittsburgh club, acting in the role of manager and catcher. I happened to pick up a New York Herald in the hotel lobby after arriving from Boston on the night train and was amazed to read a streamer over the sports page that read:

"McGillicuddy and His Pittsburgh Pirates in Town Today."

Was Pittsburgh Catcher

That was the first time the name McGillicuddy ever had appeared in print as relating to me and that afternoon at the ball park I sought O. P. Caylor, a famous writer, who was sports editor of the Herald for many years, and inquired how he ever learned my true family name.

I didn't resent it mind you, but was naturally curious as no one in the league ever thought my real name was other than Mack. With a laugh, Mr. Caylor told me the story.

"You see, I used to own a newspaper in Carthage, Mo.," he went on, "and I sold it to a man named Eugene Roach and then came East. Now, a couple of weeks ago, Mr. Roach was in the East and he called on me at my office and a general conversation turned into baseball channels.

"Mr. Roach told me that he never missed seeing a baseball game when he could attend one, adding that it was only natural, as his first cousin was a leading player in the National League.

"'Who is he?' I asked, 'for I know them all.'

"'Why, Cornelius McGillicuddy, of the Pirates,' came the answer.

"'Don't tell me that,' I replied with a little heat, 'there is no such player in baseball.'

"'He's there all right, and, moreover, he manages the team. He plays under the name of Mack, but his real name is McGillicuddy.'"

Spoofed About Name

Mr. Caylor then told me that he only awaited the arrival of the Pittsburgh team to tell the public what an odd-sounding name there was in baseball.

Fellow members of the Pirates also read the article and jovial

BUCS MAKE NIGHT DEBUT

SPORT COMMENT
by JAMES J. LONG

Duquesne's Co-Captains. | Another Tennis Upset.
Cards Threaten Bruins. | Wilson Cracks Record.
Hard Task for Diegel. | Quick Welter Changes.

FIRST TRIAL HERE OF DUAL LEADERS

THE NIGHT RIDERS of Duquesne University, who will play seven and possibly more of the ten games on this year's difficult football schedule after dark, will give the co-captains idea its Pittsburgh introduction when they open the local gridiron season on September 19. The inaugural number on that date will show the Dukes pitted against West Virginia University under the floodlights at Forbes Field, much more of a real contest than the average curtain-raiser and one promising a far greater number of thrills than any opener played here in a long time. In Morgantown last year the Bluffites held the Mountaineers to a 7-to-7 tie.

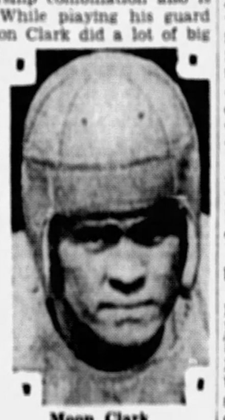
Ganzy Benedict

George (Ganzy) Benedict, of Duquesne, and John (Moon) Clark, of Clairton, are the dual gridiron leaders of the Red and Blue this year, the first time the system has been tried in Pittsburgh. In the season before last, Duquesne had two captains for the varsity track team, the title being held jointly by Henry Schnelbach, star dash man, and Joe Pesci, capable miler. And the school came close to having two basketball captains also. But for the gallant withdrawal of Benedict in favor of the diminutive Brud Stephens when the count of the ballots showed a tie vote, such would be the case for the next floor campaign.

BENEDICT COVERED HIMSELF with gridiron glory last season and the season before through his accurate tosses of the pigskin when carrying out some of the frequent forward passing that characterizes the Dukes' style of play under the Notre Dame system so ably taught on the Bluff by a past master, Head Coach Elmer Layden.

Ganzy is one of Layden's best bets in the backfield, and comes just about as close as any halfback does these days to deserving triple-threat recognition. He has all of the requisites of that ranking. He is a running back of worth, he can get off a better than ordinary kick, and, of course, his passing need not be discussed. Benedict has been a big factor in Duquesne's march to the front.

THE OTHER HALF of the twin-leadership combination also is an important cog in the Duke machine. While playing his guard position in Joe Bach's strong line last season Clark did a lot of big things that caused his fellow letter men to elect him as one of their captains.



Moon Clark

It was a well merited honor. Moon is an exceptionally good player, on both the offensive and defensive, and no doubt will make a capable and respected leader. It is safe to predict that much of whatever measure of success may come to the Dukes in football this year will be due to Benedict and Clark.

AMONG THOSE SHARING the view that baseball's future depends upon a change in the policy of the minor leagues whereby younger players will be given a chance is President Clark Griffith, of the Washington club. "Not until the minors resort to the development of young players instead of filling their ranks with major league cast-offs will the big circuits be filled with brilliant youthful stars as they were before the World War," he says. "There are very few worth-while youngsters in the minors now, and there will not be until the smaller leagues get over this foolishness of depending almost entirely upon veteran talent."*

THOUGH THE GIANTS passed up the opportunity for a gain on the league leaders which the Pirates provided by beating the Cubs three times in five games, the Cardinals, coming along with a rush, took advantage of the chance offered to such an extent that they are almost on the heels of the pace-setters and have thrown some new uncertainty around the race.

As a result of their Sunday double victory over the Reds while the Bucs were beating the Cubs in Chicago, the Cards are now only two and a half games behind the Bruins. The Missourians have won 16 of their last 18 contests while the Cubs were breaking even in the same number of games, and have got to be considered dangerous.

THE SITUATION MEANS an exciting fight in the home stretch, though the past performances of the two clubs indicate that the Cubs may prove the better road outfit. The short distance that remains to be covered is another factor that favors the Bruins.

Leo Diegel

The Cubs have only 18 games more to play and the Cards only 19. If the McCarthys merely break even, the Redbirds will have to win 13 out of 19, or travel at a .684 gait, to win out. The Reds have been of great help to the Cards in the race. Though beating Chicago 11 times in 18 games, the Howleys lost no fewer than 19 of their season's series of 22 games with St. Louis.

THOUGH THE CONTRACT of retaining the American professional golf championship, which he has held for two years, may not be quite as difficult as that which Jimmy Johnston will be up against in trying to hang on to the United States amateur title, still it's a mighty tough job that Leo Diegel is tackling in the Fresh Meadow tournament at Flushing, L. I. Even with Walter Hagen out of it, the field is one of rare class, including Gene Sarazen, Horton Smith, Harry Cooper, Johnny Farrell, Tommy Armour, Bill Mehlhorn, Al Espinosa and others. Diegel will have to be at the peak of form to escape a tumble. Sarazen, who held the same title in 1922 and 1923, looks like his most dangerous rival, in view of his recent victories in the Western Open and the J. J. Lannin Memorial tournament.*

"I SURELY IS a year of big upsets in lawn tennis. On top of the defeat of Henri Cochet at Wimbledon by Wilmer Allison, the two reverses suffered by Frank Hunter at the hands of Ellsworth Vines, and Bill Tilden's fall before Frank Shields, the start of the United States men's singles championship tournament brought another staggering surprise.

Jean Borotra, famous French ace, unanimously picked to go through easily to the finals, where it was expected he would meet

By HARRY KECK,

The pet theory of one Peter J. (Bunny) Buntach, of Braddock, gets another airing tonight.

Bunny is by way of being the manager of Buck McTiernan, George Panka and sundry other boxing disciples.

Recently, Buntach, who has gone in for wearing cheaters, as eye-glasses sometimes are known, has had his Buck McTiernan in there against such seasoned campaigners as Farmer Joe Cooper, Joe Dundee and Clyde Hull, all of whom have gone over the hill, fistically speaking, but still are formidable enough to make it tough for youngsters. He has conscientiously steered Buck clear of the reigning sensations of the welterweight and near-middleweight divisions, thereby incurring the enmity of certain followers of the mitt racket, who are accusing him of holding back the celebrated Buckets.

TEST FOR GEORGE

But Bunny knows, or thinks he knows, what he is doing.

Tonight he sends his George Panka, big Slovak man bricklayer, of Homestead, to the post against Tom Heeney, erstwhile Hard Rock from the Land Down Under, in the 10-round main bout at the Meyers Bowl, North Braddock. It is George's biggest test so far. His only other important opponent, aside from local rivals, has been Knute Hansen, the Melancholy Dane, onetime threat in the heavyweight ranks, whom he maltreated shamefully at Hickey Park, Millvale, a few months ago.

Now, no one is so brash as to state that Heeney still rates with the front rank of the world's heavyweights who find fighting easier than piano-moving; yet there is no questioning the fact that his name and fame still hold BUFFALO, Sept. 8.—Manager Jewel Ens and his Pirate band are in this city for the purpose of staging a night game tonight with the local club of the International League. It will be the first time the Buccos have participated in the nocturnal sport and most of them anticipate a lot of fun. Andy Bednar, late of the Wichita team of the Western League, is due to hurl for the big leaguers.

The Freebooters were feeling right pert as they sojourned here, their fine victory over the Cubs in Chicago yesterday adding much to their zest. The Pittsburghers scored a 9-to-7 triumph by coming from behind near the finish. Their success gave them three of five games in the hot set staged in Pittsburgh and Chicago, and the triumph in the last meeting of the two teams this season put the season's fighting on an even basis, each club winning 11 games and losing the same number.

RACE TIGHTENS

The setback handed the pace-setting Bruins had the effect of tightening up the pennant race, the Cardinals making a gain of one and one-half games as they twice trounced the lowly Reds. The Redbirds, therefore, are nestling within two and one-half games of the leaders and that is a bit too close for comfort among the topnotchers.

The last three weeks of the big race are likely to produce a lot of excitement. The fireworks will [illegible] under way tomorrow with all the flag contenders fighting on

CARDS GAIN ON CUBS

Associated Press.

The St. Louis Cardinals gained a game and one half on their two leading rivals for the National League pennant yesterday as they trounced Cincinnati in both games of a double-header while the Chicago Cubs lost to the Pirates and the New York Giants were defeated by Brooklyn. Their double victory left the Cards only two and one-half games behind the league-leading Cubs and one and one-half games ahead of the third place Giants.

New York barely held its place from the Brooklyn Robins, who climbed up to a position only a half game behind them and four and one-half games behind Chicago by their triumph. The standing of the leaders:

HARVARD CUP PLAY SET

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

The eighth annual Harvard Cup inter-scholastic net tournament, according to official pronouncement from Chairman Wilbur W. Parshley yesterday, will get under way on the University of Pittsburgh courts on Monday, September 22. Following two days of play at Pitt, the scene of action will be shifted for a day to the Shady Side Academy lot at Fox Chapel. Semi-final matches will be staged at the Arnold School, South Braddock avenue, and the final is slated for the University Club.

The competition is open to representatives of all public, parochial and private high and preparatory schools of Allegheny County. Each institution may enter two players. These need not be members of any organized team, nor winners of a school tourney. All that is required is that they be properly listed as delegates from the school and indorsed as such by the director of athletics or by the principal.

Contesting will be sponsored in singles only. The Harvard Cup was placed up in 1923. To be captured permanently, it must be won three times, not necessarily in succession, by the victorious school. Thus far no institution has contrived to garner the honor more than once, though Billy O'Loughlin twice annexed the flagon, first for Shady Side Academy in 1926 and again for Duke Prep in 1928.

Entries will be received until Friday, September 19, by Chairman Parshley at 671 Washington road, South Hills branch, Pittsburgh, Pa. Names will be taken by telephone at Lehigh 4314.

Wilson Sets New Runs Batted In Record

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—(AP.)—Hack Wilson, clubbing outfielder for the Cubs, has established a new National League record for runs batted in for one season.

Wilson now has driven in 163 runs, compared to the league record of 159 he set last season. With 18 games yet to go, Wilson has a chance to eclipse the major league record of 175 established by Lou Gehrig, of the New York Yankees, in 1927.

BROWN GOLF CHAMP

PEBBLE BEACH, Cal., Sept. 8.—(AP.)—Francis Brown, long driving star from Honolulu, won the 1930 California amateur golf championship yesterday, defeating Fay Coleman, of Los Angeles, 10 to 9 in a 36-hole final match.

Nick Altrock Says:

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—Three weeks from yesterday baseball season is over. In fact, it is over now, if the World Series isn't played in Philadelphia or Chicago. I've got a couple of hotel reservations going to waste.

Nick Altrock

The neatest trick of the year was the St. Louis Cardinals staying in ambush all season, and then popping up as vice president of the National League, but unless the Cubs are assassinated before September 28, the Cards will still be vice president when their term ends.

Hear Babe Ruth has opened his New York hat store and if Babe is doing it on the basis of home runs, Hack Wilson is entitled to open a wholesale house and sell sombreros, ulsters and overcoats.

WARNER SEES LATERAL PASS AS GREAT PLAY

GRID COACHES REALIZE ITS IMPORTANCE

By GLENN S. WARNER

Member All-America Board of Football

What will be the new developments in football this fall in styles of passing, methods of advancing the ball and in systems of defense. When the forward pass came into the game it was slow to be taken up except as a cheat or an emergency play but now even though the rule makers have every year made rules tending to make the forward pass harder to execute the play has gained ground steadily and is a very effective method of advancing the ball. The lateral pass has always been permitted by the rules but this play never has come anywhere near being developed to the limit of its possibilities. More attention has been given it by coaches in the last few years and it is now fast coming to the front as an effective weapon. The swing toward its use has no doubt been caused in a great measure by the change in methods of defensive end play. When ends were playing rather wide and carefully preventing any plays from getting outside of them the lateral pass did not work so well but the trend of methods of end defense has been fast toward the close-in smashing style.

This has made it harder to gain on plays inside of end, but as more ends have adopted the smashing game the tendency has been to develop the wider plays to a larger degree of usefulness and the lateral pass is becoming a very effective way of turning the defensive teams flanks. It can be taken for granted that we will therefore see considerable more lateral passing this year than ever before and it will add interest to the game because the lateral pass is a spectacular play.

RESULTS IN LONG RUN

Occasionally in past years we have seen a forward pass completed and then followed by the receiver of the pass making a lateral pass to another player. Only in rare instances was this forward-lateral pass completed, but when it was it has resulted in a long gain and has been one of the most spectacular plays in football. Last year some teams completed such plays several times in one game and there is no doubt but that this forward-lateral passes will become more frequent this year and in the years to come thus providing new thrills for the fans and more problems for the teams defending against them.

Some coaches have been using rather, distinctive offensive formations which they develop to a higher degree of perfection each year. These coaches who stick to one style of play from year to year are the conservative members of the coaching profession. Their opponents have scouted them for years and can diagram their plays almost as well as the originators of the plays themselves but the same plays continue to gain ground because they are sound and because of the high degree of perfection which they have developed and executed. We will continue to hear about Doble's "three out and up" off tackle play, Knute Rockne's Notre Dame shift, will continue to worry all his opponents and Howard Jones' jump shift will be just as spectacular and effective as ever. The possibilities of the "two wing back" formation will continue to be developed and modifications of the punt formation will be used by many coaches. Chick Meehan's New York University military huddle is a good idea and new models of this rythmic huddle or shift will no doubt be seen on many gridirons.

LESS CONSERVATIVE

Some coaches of the less conservative type change their style of offense nearly every year and rumors have been heard that Coach Zuppke of Illinois, will this year have another new formation. If we all adopted the same style of play the game would cease to attract the interest it now does and it is well that the game can be taught so differently and at the same time so effectively by our different schools of football thought.

In the old days football teams were equipped with dirty old clothing and a player would have been so conspicuous in a clean, nice looking uniform that he would have been embarrassed, but now the tendency is toward playing the big games in new, clean uniforms of attractive colors, and this has helped to popularize the game—numbering the players and the use of the loud speaker to announce and explain the plays as they are made is adding interest also.

Probably one of the greatest factors in bettering the game has been the better officiating of the contests and the often poorly paid officials deserve a great deal of credit instead of the frequent booing which they receive. It is a great game and shows no signs of weakening.

Babe Ruth Explains How to Score Game

By BABE RUTH,

Baseball's Highest Salaried Star.

"I've watched fellows keeping score on a ball game, but I've never been able to get the hang of it," Mac complained. "How the dickens do you keep score on a game anyway?"

That's a sort of tough question. Different people have different methods, though I guess all the baseball writers follow pretty much the same system. Anyhow I told Mac the way the baseball writers do it—and here's the method:

First off number all your players as follows: Pitcher, 1; catcher, 2; first baseman, 3; second baseman, 4; third baseman, 5; shortstop, 6; leftfielder, 7; centerfielder, 8; rightfielder, 9. Those are the numbers you use in putting down plays. There are other signs, too.

For instance a straight line (-) means a one-base hit; two lines a two-base hit, etc., and the figure of the position after the hit shows the place it went. For instance "-7" means the hitter singled to left field. For a base on balls use "B." for a strike out "K." for a force play "F." and for a fielder's choice "fc." "Bk" is the sign for a balk and "Sac" for a sacrifice.

SCORING SYSTEM

Suppose, for example we use a regular Yankee lineup. Combs, the first man up, walks. You put a "B" in the upper left hand corner of the score card. Lary sacrifices, third base to first. In Lary's space you put "Sac" and under it "5-3." Then I come up and strike out. In my space you put "K." Gehrig hits a two-bagger to center, scoring Combs. In Gehrig's space you put "-8" and Combs is credited with a score. Then Lazzeri flies out to left. You mark "F7" in his space if it's a fair ball or "f7" if it's a foul.

Suppose, for sake of example, that Rice singles and Dickey hits into a double play, short, to second to first. In Rice's column you put "-6" showing that he singled. Then on the double play you mark for Rice "6-4" and for Dicky "4-3" connecting them with a line "6-4 4-3" to show that the play was continuous and that it was a double play.

FIELDER'S CHOICE

Here's another situation that might arise. Suppose Combs is on third and I hit to the shortstop who throws to the plate, getting Combs while I am safe at first. Naturally that's not a baseHit, but a fielder's choice. So under Combs' square you put "6-2," showing that he was out shortstop to catcher, and in my square you write "fc," showing that I was safe on a fielder's choice.

It all sounds complicated I know—but it's really very simple once you get the hang of the thing and get your numbers straight. And being able to score a ball game is a mighty fine thing. Fellows who can score properly can take a score book two or three years old and read off every play, telling who got base hits, where they went, how the outs were made, and every play in the game just as it happened.

Long's Sport Comment

Tilden and perhaps take the American title to France, was eliminated in the very first round by Berkeley Bell, of Austin, Tex. That, too, after he had won the first set. Even Bell himself, upon learning that he would have to meet Borotra in the first round, had made railroad reservations to return home last Saturday night. The championship itself may be none too certain of staying with Tilden after that.

NOT ONLY WAS the American League record of 596 home runs in one season broken on Saturday, following the cracking of similar marks for the National League and for the two leagues combined, but still another batting mark was fractured on the same day.

That was the National League mark for runs knocked in during one season. The old record was 159, set by Hack Wilson, of the Cubs, last year. In Saturday's game here, Wilson passed his own figures and now boasts a new league record of 163 up to date. Probably he will yet break the mark for both major leagues, which is 175, established by Lou Gehrig in the American League in 1927. Wilson is eight runs ahead of Gehrig in this year's competition.

Tommy Freeman

THIS ISN'T THE first time that quick championship changes have featured the welterweight fistic division. The fact that Tommy Freeman, who got the title with a queer decision over Young Jack Thompson in Cleveland last Friday night, is the third man to wear the welter crown within a period of 14 months recalls an earlier period when shifts were equally frequent. That was after Mysterious Billy Smith had come into the championship by defeating Matty Matthews for recognition as title holder following the withdrawal from the class of Kid McCoy and Tommy Ryan. Smith was champion until January 25, 1900, when he lost the scepter to Rube Ferns on a foul in 21 rounds at Buffalo. Ferns held the throne less than 10 months, being defeated by Matthews in 15 rounds at Detroit on October 16, 1900, but seven months later Rube was back on top, knocking out Matthews for the title in the tenth round of a bout in Toronto on May 24, 1901. The fourth change in less than 23 months came on December 18, 1901, when Joe Walcott beat Ferns in five rounds at Fort Erie.

Hauser Equals Babe Ruth's Homer Mark

BALTIMORE, Sept. 8.—(AP.)—Joe Hauser, first baseman of the Baltimore Orioles, of the International League, yesterday drove out his sixtieth home run of the season and equaled the world record chalked up in 1927 by Babe Ruth, of the New York Yankees.

The blow came in the fifth inning of the first game of a double bill with Jersey City. The bases were empty and no one was out. The ball went to the top of the rightfield bleachers, where it was retrieved by a fan and returned to Hauser.

'CHESNEYTOWN MAY PLAY AT NIGHT

By TOM BIRKS.

There seems to be a chance that the McChesneytown gridiron club will use the Jeannette Middle Atlantic League Club's field with its flood lights, for home games of the Big Red Machine in the Western Pennsylvania Independent Gridiron Conference.

Manager Hector Kennedy, of the Latrobe team and other officials went into session with the Jeannette school board Friday evening and everything seems favorable for the deal. While the baseball club operates the field in the league, the lighting equipment and the lease comes through school board officials. With the gridiron teams paying a percentage, and large crowds expected at all of the five games, it would be a distinct advantage to the school authorities. It would be new territory for clubs like West View, Hope Harvey, McKeesport Olympics, East Pittsburgh and Burns, of New Kensington.

MAY PLAY AT NIGHT

Jimmy Smith, mentor of the Burns club, is still dickering with the West Penn Power Company for the installation of lights at Parnassus field. Danny Burns is in favor of the lights, so it is possible the Aluminum club will play its home games in the conference in the evenings, as well as several games in Ohio on Sunday.

It is reported Dellman and Adolph Pendro, former East Pittsburgh stars, will be playing with Burns this season. The Burns club will hold a reorganization meeting this evening in the high school gymnasium. Sharkey received a bad leg injury last year and is not likely to play this year.

Manager Fred Iverson, of the McKeesport Olympics, staged his first workout yesterday afternoon. A group of former college stars trotted out on the gridiron. Schachern, last year's captain and quarterback, will not be with the club, and gossip indicated Stanley Berkman will be wearing the Black and White this season. To fill Schachern's shoes, Iverson had four outstanding players — Scott, of Cornell; Forrest Ford, captain at Waynesburg in 1928; Harry Dangerfield, of Penn State, and Barnes, formerly Virginia Military Institute man. Philpot, a boy from Turtle Creek, also was out showing his stuff for the job.

STARS ON SCENE

Kalitz, last year's fullback, was in uniform, alternating at center with Peck Minnick. Coach Sullivan has a wealth of backfield material, with Andy Zoltac on hand. Last season, with Minnick on the side lines, center was a weak position.

Two former local college stars were fighting for the end jobs—Bill Lohr, of Pitt, and Williams, of Waynesburg. Watts, a burly guard from the University of North Carolina, also attracted the fans. Another halfback from the Far West, Higley, of Minnesota, also was prominent.

Next Sunday Manager Iverson wants a club to open at Rainbow Gardens, so any team wishing to get started should call McKeesport 9606.

GUEST IS PRO GOLF LEADER

FRESH MEADOW GOLF CLUB, Flushing, N. Y., Sept. 8.—(AP.)—Charley Guest, Pontiac, Mich., with a score of 71 for the first 18 holes of the 36-hole qualifying round of the P. G. A. championship, assumed a temporary lead in the field of 68 here today. Bill Mehlhorn, Pensacola, Fla., was in second place with 76 when Guest finished.

Guest's score was one aover par, scored in a tricky wind which caused thes tar pros plenty of trouble during the morning.

The scores for the first 18 holes:

Pat Cirelli, New Rochelle, N. Y.	41-38	79
Tom Boomer, Elmira, N. Y.	40-42	82
Peter O'Hara, Pittsburgh	43-42	85
Charley Guest, Pontiac, Mich.	36-35	71
Walter Beamish, Geneseo, N. Y.	39-39	78
H. E. Walter, Gary, Ind.	38-42	80
Ralph Beach, Baltimore	41-42	83
Bill Mehlhorn, Pensacola, Fla.	37-39	76
R. W. Treacy, Milwaukee, Wis.	44-42	86

Homestead Grays Get Even Break

CHICAGO, Sept. 8.—After losing the first game in 11 innings, 4 to 3, the Homestead Grays came back and won the second game of the double-header from the American Giants, 8 to 6, here yesterday, making the series thus far stand three victories against one defeat in the Pittsburghers' favor.

GRID RULES Interpretations

PLAY NO. 7.

Princeton has the ball with fourth down and nine yards to gain against Dartmouth when a forward pass is attempted. McCall, of Dartmouth, jumps into the air and knocks the pass down, but bats it into the arms of Meeks, of Princeton. The latter is tackled after a net gain of eight yards. Princeton claims a first down.

What is the correct ruling?

ANSWER.

The referee rules that the ball goes to Dartmouth on fourth down, as the ball did not pass into actual possession of Dartmouth and the required nine yards was not made by Princeton.

TRAINER JIMMY HENNESSEY TOM HEENEY MATCHMAKER JULES BECK MANAGER CHARLEY HARVEY

a lure for the fans, and he is far from a fighting cripple. He has in his favor the experience that comes from having fought Gene Tunney, Jack Sharkey, Johnny Risko, Uzcudun Paulino, Jack Delaney, Jim Maloney and many others.

BUNTACH'S THEORY

And that's where Bunny's pet theory comes in. Buntach hasn't been around in the fight game very long, but he believes that the best way to develop fighters is to send them along carefully against men of greater experience. They thus gain in two ways. First, they learn as they go along, picking up a few tricks from this fellow, a few more from that one and still some more from another. And, as they find they can hold their own with the so-called Big Names, they become steadily bolder and finally find themselves good, if not great, in their own right.

Right now, Buntach has McTiernan at the point where he believes he is ready for anybody in the welterweight class. If Panka gets past Heeney tonight, he will have taken an important step and Buntach will feel safe in taking longer chances with him. If George can't beat Heeney, Bunny will send him back to the gymnasium to learn his lessons a little more thoroughly before starting him against such a seasoned foe again.

HEENEY EXPECTS VICTORY

It is a slow and tedious route and one that would not be followed by a money-grasping pilot. Buntach does not have to depend upon the earnings of his fighters for his livelihood and can afford to test out his theory. It has been demonstrated in other cases that it is a good one, and well worth the time and effort. Benny Leonard and others have been brought along slowly but thoroughly to championship heights and then have proved so mechanically perfect as to be almost unbeatable.

The Heeney fight tonight will go a long way toward deciding whether or not Panka has the "makings" and will wind up in the big money class of heavyweight fighters. He has youth and the proper fighting spirit in his favor and the experience he will gain from fighting a man of Heeney's background should prove of incalculable worth as a milestone in his fistic education.

Heeney arrived in town this morning fit for the battle. He naturally expects to win decisively against the man whose reputation so far is little more than local. The advance sale of tickets for the fray indicates that the largest crowd of the season will be on hand for the battle of the big fellows.

WILLIAMS IN SEMI

Jack Cunningham, of Cleveland, will take the place of Chuck Taggert, of Butler, against Harry Williams, of the North Side, in the eight-round semi-final, also a heavyweight affair. Taggert decided he was not in sufficiently good physical condition to go through with the match. In the two six-round preliminaries, Nick Polis, of Aliquippa, meets Sunny Jim McVey, of Rankin, and Chuck Zelnack, of Glassport, opposes Snowflakes Wright, of Cleveland. The first bout is scheduled for 8:45 daylight savings time.

Between Rounds

Promoters Jim McGirr, of McKeesport, and Charley Lark, of Hickey Park, hope to complete their cards today for their rival shows Thursday night. McGirr has Tom Mairo, of Niles, and Billy Rose, of Cincinnati, welterweights, in the main bout of his show, which opens the indoor season in this section, and has matched Allen Beatty, of McKeesport, with Jimmy McGraw, of Wheeling, for the eight-round semi-final. Lark heads only an opening bout for his Schenley-Belle-Jory Thomas program. He has Georgie Bertsch and Al Becker in his eight-round semi-final and Young Ketchel and Anastasio Varquette in the second bout.

Announcement that Angelo Meyers, of Braddock, has taken over the lease of Francis Flynn on the Moose Temple arena and will begin staging indoor shows there beginning Friday night, September 26, means that the Meyers Bowl will hold only two more shows after tonight's offering, opening with its card of Monday, September 22.

SOCCER LOOPS MEET TONIGHT

Two big soccer meetings will be held this evening. At Honus Wagner's store, the Pittsburgh Central League will hold its final pre-season confab. At this session the assignment of referees for Saturday's games will be made, and all business dealing with the official opening will be disposed of. At Gallatin, President Joe Crompton, of the Monongahela Valley League, will hold his second get-together. Four clubs attended the last meeting of the body, but with other teams coming along, the up-river prexy feels it will be possible to close the loop with eight entries.

Sunday, the Keystone and Panhandle Leagues meet at Bridgeville. Presidents Hillen and Smith will handle these affairs. Referees for league games will be assigned at these meetings.

It appears that Heidelberg will play its games at the Bridgeville Speedway this season. Bill O'Donnell has a lease on the grounds.

GRID WORK RESUMED

PITT, PLAID, DUKES GET STIFF DRILLS

By JESS CARVER.

The college football boys will get down to right serious business beginning with today. Not that the drills of the past week have been anything like pink teas, but the worst, by far, is yet to come. In fact, it is here.

From now on until the opening of the season, and then on throughout the campaign, count the day lost that does not bring its collection of bear stories. With the advent of the more grueling practice sessions, come the more serious injuries. Geneva reported the first major crack-up of the year when word emanated from the Covenanter camp to the effect that Red Davis, last year's captain and end, had injured one of his props and would be on the shelf for at least three weeks.

Behind closed doors the Dukes went through a long drill yesterday. Carnegie Tech rested its hopefuls and the boys at Camp Hamilton, Windber, Pa., had the lightest sort of exercises; just enough to keep 'em from stiffening up over the week end. Coach Sutherland went to New York for the coaches' and officials' confab.

The Dukes are more pressed for time than the others, for they hop off against West Virginia here next week. Thursday the Mountaineers will open training in Morgantown, and will have only a week and a day to prep for the opening tussle (which promises to be a honey) with the Bluffites.

Messrs. Waddell and Steffen are going to brush up on the offense of their Plaid machine beginning today. They've passed out half a dozen plays for the lads to puzzle their heads over and they have been worked up to a point of high efficiency in long signal drills.

The Tipoff

Among the former Pittsburgh high school grid luminaries who are showing well in college training camps is Johnny Nunn, of Peabody, who is seeking an end berth at Geneva. With Red Davis injured, and likely to be out of the opening game, Nunn's chances of breaking into the lineup are vastly improved.

Halfback Haldy, at Westminster, is showing no little promise as a ball toter. I watched him in action t'other day and he slipped off the tacklers and shook himself through the line in creditable fashion.

Elmer Lardon is seeking a remedy for the light-heartedness of his Pulaski Tornado (he isn't so hard to watch). Despite the fact he has a veteran squad, Elmer is worried, for as he says, the boys won't settle down. They are working hard but appear cocky.

This cockiness (if any), Mr. Lardon, is going to disappear exactly one-half a second after the first brush with the Mountaineers. Even though they won't have had as long to practice as your team, those Mountaineers are going to be pretty tough, and if you are afraid your boys will not take them seriously—perish the thought.

Dick Very and A. W. Millan, two of the local gridiron athletes, were among the locals who attended the officials and coaches meetings in Gotham over the week-end.

Sport Vignettes

Not an American head but is resting easier since that 10-5 polo victory over the British . . . And not a single squawk that it was in the bag . . . As a matter of fact, they don't have bags around a polo field.

* * *

Speaking of burlaps, fans still are punching the bag about that Tommy Freeman-Young Jack Thompson thing in Cleveland the other night, in which Thompson lost the world welterweight title after 15 rounds of punching the daylights out of Tommy . . . As a fight it was o. k., but that decision by Referee Patsy Haley was a pip . . . What was behind it? The fact that Haley and Freeman both are Irish? Or that Thompson is a Negro? Or just plain bungling? Or something more sinister? . . . One little birdie's whisper is that Thompson and his backers merely are loaning the title to Freeman for a while to let Tommy, a nice young gentleman of the ring, make a little money for himself for a change after a long career filled with disappointments, and at the same time protect Thompson from the challenges of Jimmy McLarnin and Young Corbett, which had been becoming hotter and hotter . . . The heavy dough will be on Thompson again when, and if, he meets Freeman in a return bout . . . He has too much speed and class for Tommy, an earnest and courageous, but somewhat muscle-bound, mitt-wielder.

When it comes to gentlemen in the ring, Tom Heeney, the Australian, who meets George Panka in the Meyers Bowl tonight, ranks somewhere near the top of the list . . . Always trying and giving his best efforts in his peculiar plodding manner, Heeney long ago acquired the label of "Honest Tom" . . . Recently he was technically knocked out in the closing rounds of a battle with young Tuffy Griffiths in New York . . . After the bout, Tuffy almost broke down and cried . . . Said he never had met a cleaner fighter in his long career, and that, no matter how badly he abused Heeney, the latter never tried to resort to dirty tactics . . . "There was no wrestling or gouging or hitting on the breaks or trying to hammer home blows below the belt," said Tuffy. "It was all so different that I hardly could believe it was true. I'll take off my hat to Tom, a real sportsman and a fellow who deserves nothing but the best."

Strikes us that Jean Borotra, the French star, came a long way to take that trouncing from Berkeley Bell, unseeded young Texan, in the first round of the National tennis singles at Forest Hills . . . But look at the spare time Jean will have on his hands this week!—HARRY KECK.

GENERALS TOP JOHNNIES, 9-8

CLARKSBURG, W. Va., Sept. 8.—(AP.)—Clarksburg's Generals continued to forward march toward the Middle Atlantic playoff championship, defeating Johnstown, 9 to 8, yesterday. The Generals, holding three decisions to one for the first half champs, can settle the issue by winning today at Johnstown.

Roberts, Johnstown, and Wallace, Clarksburg, the starting hurlers, were clubbed soundly from the start. Wallace departed in the fourth in favor of Clooman, as Johnstown took a 7-to-4 lead.

Roberts lingered until the eighth when the Generals, trailing, 8 to 6, clubbed him and his successor, Jones, during a three-run rally that put Clarksburg in front.

Johnstown outhit Clarksburg, 16 to 13. Thomas, Johnstown outfielder and leadoff man, was a hitting star, getting a home run and two singles in five attempts. The score:

Murder is Charged In Kelliher's Death

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—(AP.)—Murder charges were filed against three Washington men in connection with the death of Maurice (Mickey) Kelliher, baseball player, who had been reported killed in an automobile accident early yesterday on the Washington-Alexandria highway.

The complaint charged Kelliher was thrown from the automobile occupied by Earl J. Garrison, William McKeever and William Shea, just before it struck another machine. Police said the warrants were based on the affidavits of two persons who said they saw Kelliher thrown from the car.

Kelliher at one time was candidate for first base with the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Grid Star Killed In Auto Accident

OAKLAND, Cal., Sept 8.—(INS.)—Sleeping at the wheel today was believed responsible for the death by fire of John S. Rawlings, Jr., star football player of the University of Washington and the Olympic Club. Rawlins' machine crashed into the rear of a parked truck. The impact hurled the engine back into the driver's seat, trapping Rawlins in the flames. Police believe the youth fell asleep.

FITZ-HENRY COPS

FITZ-HENRY, Pa., Sept. 8.—Playing a fine game on a fast field, the Fitz-Henry Soccer Club defeated the Uniontown eleven in the first exhibition game of the season, 7 goals to 0, here yesterday. Diehl, Lancaster and Lyons starred for the winners.

BRIDGEVILLE TRACK OPENS TONIGHT

Dog racing in the Pittsburgh district goes back on double time tonight, when the Bridgeville Speedway track goes back into operation for its late summer meeting, joining the New Kensington Speedway track, with which it vied for patronage in the spring.

Ten races are offered each night at each of the tracks. Both tracks will operate on about a 30-day schedule.

PIRATES PLAY NIGHT TILT

Eastern soil. The Cubs will move in on the Robins with the fast-going Cardinals invading the home of the Giants.

The Buccos will not begin their last Eastern invasion until Wednesday when they swing into actio with the Braves. Tomorrow morning they will move from here to Syracuse for the purpose of playing another exhibition contest, this to be a daylight affair.

DEFEAT CUBS AGAIN

With Paul Waner beating a powerful tattoo on Joe McCarthy's pitchers, the Ensmen were able to overtake the Bears yesterday. The Pirates jumped off in the first round with a three-run lead, but the home team came from behind with sufficient force to forge to the front and the Freebooters moved into the seventh round three runs in arrears.

Brother Paul's second three-bagger of the afternoon was a potent stroke in getting the Pirates back in the thick of the fight. Bool opened the seventh with a walk and Mosolf, batting for Spencer, also drew a pass. L. Waner flied out but Paul whipped a triple to center scoring two runs. The Cubs came back with a run in their half, but in the eighth the invaders treated themselves to three tallies and thereby took the lead.

Bartell walked with one out. Suhr singled to right, Bartell taking second. Bool singled to left, scoring Bartell and sending Suhr to third. Teachout relieved Bush and he fanned Engle who batted for Wood. Brother Lloyd came through with a hit to left, scoring Suhr with the tying run, Bool taking second. P. Waner drove in his fourth run of the day when he scored Bool with a single to center.

BARTELL HITS HOMER

Dick Bartell gave the Pirates a safety run in the ninth when he hit the rocket into the rightfield bleachers with two out. Bell, Stephenson and Kelly also cracked out homers during the progress of the game.

Charley Wood, kid left-hander, although he pitched only one round, received credit for the game. Spencer and Osborn were the starting pitchers, the home team using four sharpshooters. Ervin Brame worked the last two frames for the Pirates and held the enemy runless.

Stapp, U. S. Driver, Finishes Eighth

MONZA, Italy, Sept. 8.—(AP.)—Babe Stapp, American pilot, finished no better than eighth in the Monza automobile racing classic here yesterday.

The first three places went to the Italians, Varzi, Arcangeli and Erneste Maserati, all of whom piloted Maserati machines. Varzi negotiated the course of 240.135 kilometers, a little more than 150 miles, in one hour 35 minutes 46 1-5 seconds.

MY 50 YEARS IN BASEBALL

By CONNIE MACK

players of both our team and the Giants constantly rang "McGillicuddy" in my ears during the game.

The Herald's story was copied in Pittsburgh newspapers and soon every fan in Pittsburgh knew it. When the Pirates returned to Pittsburgh for a home stand, I was "McGillicuddied" from all sides. At the end of our first game a knot of kids waited for me at the exit gate and shouted:

"Look, look, McGillicuddy is here!" marching after me and repeating it in chorus as I walked down the street.

In time the rebirth of the family name wore off and it generally has been Connie Mack ever since, although I always use the proper name in dealing with legal documents. I never legally changed my name and my wife and children always have borne it.

Parents Born in Ireland

Both my father, Michael, and my mother, Mary, were born in Ireland, but were taken to America by their parents when children. Father was 10 years old and mother 7 when they arrived. Their families were unknown to each other in the old country, and it is a coincidence that both should settle in the placid little village of East Brookfield, Mass., having at the time no more than 500 souls.

There are four little Brookfields clustered together like gems on a brooch. East Brookfield, West Brookfield, North Brookfield and South Brookfield are separated only by a few miles of Massachusetts rock and soil.

The question of geographic location was artfully made easy by George M. Cohan, the actor and playwright, who wrote a play with the scene in East Brookfield and called it "Fifty Miles from Boston." Mr. Cohan lived for a time in his younger days in East Brookfield.

Michael McCillicuddy came to America in 1846 at the age of 10, and, 10 years later, he married Mary McKillop, the Irish girl who had come to this country around the same time.

At the time of the marriage, my father was a hard-working wheelwright in a wagon factory in East Brookfield. He saved his money and was seized with an unyielding resolution to make something out of himself in the New World.

Seven Children in Family

The bride and groom were young in years, but it was a most successful and happy marriage and they reared five sons and two girls. Only my eldest brother, Michael, who lives in Philadelphia, and myself survive. The second child was Nellie, who has passed away, while I was the third to visit the home. Dennis, Thomas, Eugene and Mary, who followed, are all dead.

Forbes

Notable Gains In Stocks in Last 2 Months

By B. C. FORBES

RETURNING to Wall Street after a two months' tour of the continent, the writer has been interested in comparing stock quotations then and now.

Mr. Forbes

During the early part of July the average for 50 representative stocks was as low as 184. These same stocks closed on Saturday at 204. This represents an advance averaging 20 points in high-grade stocks.

INDUSTRIAL issues have done best. Since the last week in June they have advanced from a low of 253 to better than 293, a gain of fully 40 points.

Representative railroad stocks are a shade lower now than they were in the first week of July.

Most utilities have advanced moderately. A few have bounded up quite sharply, but several are lower than they were two months ago.

HAVING VOICED the opinion before leaving that the stock market was likely to do better later in the year, the market's recent strength naturally has been gratifying to the writer. Much more important, its improvement is an extremely good thing for the country.

Deflation has gone too far. Pessimism has gone much too far. A change in sentiment would do more than almost anything else to encourage a change in conditions. Gloom incites contraction, retrenchment, unemployment. Optimism stimulates enterprise, expansion, employment.

THE WRITER has felt all along that the stock market would turn earlier than industry and general business. Lately the market has had every earmark of being oversold. Bear attacks no longer precipitate public liquidation. Short covering immediately causes a recovery.

Of course, the market's action will be governed later on by the trend of business. July and August were poor months. More recently there have been a few encouraging symptoms. But the writer would prefer to familiarize himself more thoroughly with what's what before venturing an opinion as to the longer outlook.

THIS TABLE shows how representative industrial stocks stand today as compared with their low levels in the week ending July 12:

LIVERPOOL, Sept. 8.—Wheat was due ½ to 1½ pence higher. Opened ½ to ¾ pence up, and at 1:30 p. m. was ½ to 1 pence.

MESTA BOOKED TO YEAR'S END

Mesta Machine Company has enough unfilled orders on its books to insure continuous operation of its machinery sections for the balance of this year, with a considerable volume to carry over into 1931, according to a statement issued by the Standard Statistics Company.

The statement also forecasts earnings of $4 a share for 1930 against $2.82 in 1929. Net loss for the first six months was $1,271,000, or $2.03 a share compared with $934,120 or $1.47 a share in the similar period a year ago. On the basis of this showing, the annual dividend basis of the common recently was advanced to $2 a share. Previous rate was 40 cents regular and 10 cents extra quarterly.

The financial position of the company has been strengthened, according to Standard Statistics, with current assets on June 30, 1930, totaling $5,065,330, including $2,789,630 cash, against $1,310,298 current liabilities. Net working capital was $650,000 greater than at the end of 1929.

FOLLOW THESE RULES:

1—Everyone is eligible to participate in the Title Hunt except employes of the Sun-Telegraph and members of their families.

2—Every day from September 7 to October 6, inclusive, ten Ripley "Believe It or Not" pictures (without description) will be published in addition to the regular Ripley feature. The descriptions for each picture will be published in the Classified Ad columns.

3—The Title Hunt consists in finding the descriptions in the Classified Ads, clipping them out, and placing each under the picture to which it refers. The words making up each description will appear as a single unit in one place.

4—Hold all of the pictures until you have thirty complete sets of 10 each—300 pictures in all. Then send them in to Ripley's Title Hunt Editor, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, Telegraph Square, Pittsburgh, Pa.

5—All entries must be postmarked not later than midnight, October 31. No entries will be returned to the sender.

6—$1,500.00 in cash prizes, in accordance with the complete prize list published herewith, will be paid to the persons sending in the most nearly correct and neatest complete set of pictures at the close of the Title Hunt.

7—A committee of judges will be appointed by the Sun-Telegraph to determine the successful contestants. All entrants agree to accept the decisions of the judges as final. In case of ties, a duplicate award will be given each tying contestant.

8—It is not necessary to purchase the Sun-Telegraph to compete. This newspaper may be examined at any of its offices or at the public libraries free of charge, and if you wish you may copy or trace the pictures as well as the descriptions from the Sun-Telegraph and then assemble the sets from the copies you have made.

Stocks Irregular — Shamrock Oil Moves Up

STOCKS PUSHED ON TO HIGHER LEVELS

Bull Operators Continue Drive for Recovery—Steel Sluggish, Others Gain

NEW YORK, Sept. 8 (AP.)—With the general level of share prices in the critical area that brought grief to the July bull campaign, bullish stock market operators today continued to drive on toward new high levels for the recovery from the June deflation.

Although several of the leading shares, such as United States Steel, were somewhat sluggish, a wide assortment of issues was marked up 1 to 3 points, with a few wide movers gaining 5 or more. Issues advancing 1 to more than 2 points included American Can, American Telephone, Kennecott, North American, General Motors, Chrysler, Radio Keith, Air Reduction, Sears Roebuck, Dupont, Stone and Webster, Gulf States Steel, Southern Pacific, Transamerica and Lehman Corp. Columbian Carbon, Auburn and Diamond Match gained more than 5.

BIG BLOCKS TRADED

Although the market was somewhat more active than it has been of late, commission houses found the general public still cautious. Several of the pool favorites were turned over in large volume recently in an effort to make an impressive appearance on the tape. One block of 24,700 shares of Radio Keith was traded, and blocks of 5,000 shares were more numerous than for some time.

Business news was scarcely of a character to influence the market one way or the other, but the more cheerful tenor was maintained. Declaration of extra dividends on Mead Johnson and Novadel Agene, two rather inactive curb stocks, was at least a change in the dividend news, if not particularly significant.

Early estimates quickened slightly this week, and surveys from merchandising sources continued to report seasonal pickup.

INTEREST RATE LOW

Announcement that the new issue of treasury certificates would bear the low interest rate of 2¼ per cent was regarded as a fresh indication of the plenitude of capital seeking employment.

In the bond market, prime liens continued in demand, steadily reducing yields. Call money held at 2½ per cent. Whether stocks are again to enjoy any such favor as they did during the 1927-9 period remains to be seen, but attractive dividend yields, as compared to yields obtainable on bonds, appears to be bringing a certain amount of investment capital back into equity shares. Moody's calculate the average yield on 403 stocks at the end of August at 9.14 per cent.

RESTRICTING FACTORS

Factors restricting the flow of investment funds into the share market, however, are the widespread belief that numerous dividend reductions will be announced during the next few months, and the fact that many of the prime dividend payers, popular with investment trusts, have already been bid up to levels yielding only from 2 to 4 per cent.

The motor and motor equipment shares were generally firm, although the expected autumn pick-up in automobile manufacturing has been disappointing. The fact that production fell in August to the lowest level since 1921 is interpreted in the more optimistic motor trade circles as indicating that considerable buying is being deferred pending better times, and should make its appearance in 1931.

Among the less favorable developments of the day was a sharp drop in cotton futures on publication of the government crop estimate, and gasoline price reductions in the Metropolitan New York area. Oil shares were sluggish.

Utilities Report Higher Earnings for First Half of 1930.

Despite the sluggishness that prevailed in most industries throughout the first half of the current year, public utility companies were able to report larger gross and net returns as a general rule by comparison with the first half of 1929. A compilation just completed by Dominick & Dominick shows that gross revenues of 95 representative companies aggregated $1,191,500,000 equivalent to an increase of 5 per cent over the 1929 showing, while net of the same companies was $528,500,000 or 4.1 per cent ahead of last year's comparative figure. The country's consumption of electric power in the six months to June 30, last, reached 37.8 billion kilowatt hours, a gain of 1.7 per cent over the first half of 1929 and of 15.1 per cent over the first half of 1928. The really outstanding factor contributing to this showing was the decided gain in domestic consumption of electric energy.

The commodity markets will do little more than attempt to discount the forthcoming government reports over the next few days in the opinion of close followers of the situation. Private forecasts indicate the cotton trade is anticipating an indicated yield of about 14,000,000 to 14,100,000 bales to be shown in the government return, compared with 14,362,000 bales as of August 1. Not much change is looked for in the wheat total, which will be out on Wednesday, but the indicated corn yield as of September 1 is expected to be shown around 1,950,000,000 to 2,000,000,000 bushels as against 2,212,000,000 bushels in the August report and 2,807,000,000 bushels in the July report before the severe drought set in. The actual 1929 yield was 2,622,000,000 bushels.

Baldwin Locomotive's action during the past few days has been such as would recall the time not far back when it was among 'the most spectacular performers in the industrial list. Prior to the capital adjustment, which resulted in a splitup of the old stock on a four-for-one basis, Baldwin had for a time been rather inactive because of the fact that the floating supply of the issue had become almost nil in consequence of continued accumulation by a powerful group of market operators. But before that development and in the post-war bull market and likewise during the early stages of the Coolidge rise it had frequently provided a good part of the day's fireworks in the speculative market. Current strength presumably reflects a rather hasty retreat of a long slumbering short interest stirred to action by the favorable nature of reports bearing on the company's position and prospects.

In refreshing contrast of the long list of companies paring down dividend payments, the action of McKeesport Tin Plate in declaring an extra dividend of 50 cents per share places it on a decidedly attractive pedestal for investors seeking stocks which have more than held their own in the present depression. Earnings for the first half year were 39 per cent greater than in the corresponding period of 1929, and were equal to $5.04 per share. It is considered more than likely that full 1930 profits will approximate $10 per share. The limited capitalization of the company, consisting solely of 300,000 shares of common stock, and the 6 per cent yield available at current prices, make this issue one of the outstanding buys of the present market.

Stone & Webster is one of the more conservatively valued members of the utility group, with the interests of the company generally more diversified than other systems. In addition to acting as supervisor for utility organizations under its management, it is prominent in an engineering capacity. It has also entered in the field of underwriting and selling security investments. Earnings for the year ended June 30, including profits from the sale of securities, were equal to $5.49 per share, more than sufficient to cover dividend requirements of $4. The present market price of Stone & Webster is substantially below the offering price a year ago, and affords a return of slightly above 5 per cent.

With the majority of speculative interests apparently "sour" on the oil group for the time being, one pertinent piece of news bearing on the oil situation has seemingly escaped notice. This was the advice telling of the firming up of gasoline quotations, for the first time in a year, and may indicate that the turning point in the ill advised price cutting war has been reached. Atlantic Refining, one of the old Standard Oil group, will be one of the principal beneficiaries of this improvement. Earnings for the first six months while showing a sharp decrease, were sufficient to cover dividend requirements. Returning a yield of 6 per cent at prevailing levels, long-pull holders should witness improved levels with a return to normalcy in the industry.

NEW YORK CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—(AP.)—Sentiment improved on the curb today and prices pointed higher, although the advance was not particularly aggressive and was interrupted now and then by minor profittaking. Sales volume increased.

Comptroller Asks Change In Branch Bank Law

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—(AP.)—The business depression in the United States this summer has strengthened the belief of John W. Pole, comptroller of the currency, that an extension of branch banking privileges should be given national banks.

A change in present law to permit metropolitan national banks to establish branches within certain areas was advocated by Pole at the San Francisco convention of the American Bankers Association last year as a means of stabilizing the condition of smaller institutions, and in testimony before the House Banking Committee last winter.

Pole believes that if branch banking privileges were extended it would be possible for the parent bank to have a diversified banking business to protect it against economic depression in any one locality or in any one industrial activity or business enterprise.

Measures for permitting branch banking have been introduced in both Houses of Congress and they are expected to receive considerable attention at the December session. It is likely that this subject will occupy a prominent position in the world of finance for the next few months.

Favors "Trade Area" Plan

THE COMPTROLLER of the currency pointed out that about three-fourths of the United States banks are outside of the metropolitan centers and that they serve the majority of the population. They have a small investment of capital funds, he said, because there is not enough banking business in their localities to justify a larger capital.

More than three-fourths of all national banks are capitalized at less than $200,000, he said, adding that a study of bank earnings showed a large percentage of those outside the principal cities are operating with insufficient earnings. He asserted that in 1927, using that as a typical year, 966 national banks operated at a loss and an additional 2,000 earned less than five per cent.

The inability of many country banks to earn a fair profit upon invested capital, Pole said, is naturally reflected in the large number of failures which have occurred.

The comptroller advocated permitting branch banks in trade areas served by the parent institution. He is opposed to confining the area to the state in which the parent bank is located.

Using Cincinnati as an example, he said a large percentage of the city's trade area was located in Kentucky and it would be unfair to the banks to limit their branch activities to Ohio.

Foreign Branches Allowed

THE PRESENT LAW PERMITS national banks to establish branches in all foreign countries, in the insular possessions of the United States and within the corporate limits of all large cities in which the head office of the bank is situated and where the state law permits state banks to have branches. Metropolitan banks cannot extend their services to the rural communities by establishing branches.

Pole said group banking, in which a central financial corporation acquires the controlling interest in the stock of a number of banks, possessed many advantages, but all of them were embodied in the branch banking proposal in a manner which would prove more effective.

Latest figures announced by the Federal Reserve Board show that in June there were 67 bank suspension with total deposits of $71,029,000. Ten were members of the Federal Reserve System with deposits of $16,395,000, while 57 were non-member banks with deposits of $54,634,000.

Auto Sales Show Significant Trends

Charts show the retail sales of 23 makes of motor cars (6 low priced, 11 medium priced and 6 high priced) in the first six months of 1927, 1928, 1929 and 1930. These 23 cars, representing 90% of all sales this year, are used because their models come within the three distinct price classes. The bars show the sales in ratio, with 1927 equaling 100. Source: Motor Magazine.

LOW-PRICED CARS

Ford, Chevrolet, Plymouth, Essex, Oldsmobile, Whippet

These low-priced cars have taken many sales from the medium-priced class in the past two years. 1930 is only 20% under 1929, but 33% over 1928 and 30% over 1927. 1928 is low because Ford was just starting production on his new models at that time.

MEDIUM-PRICED CARS

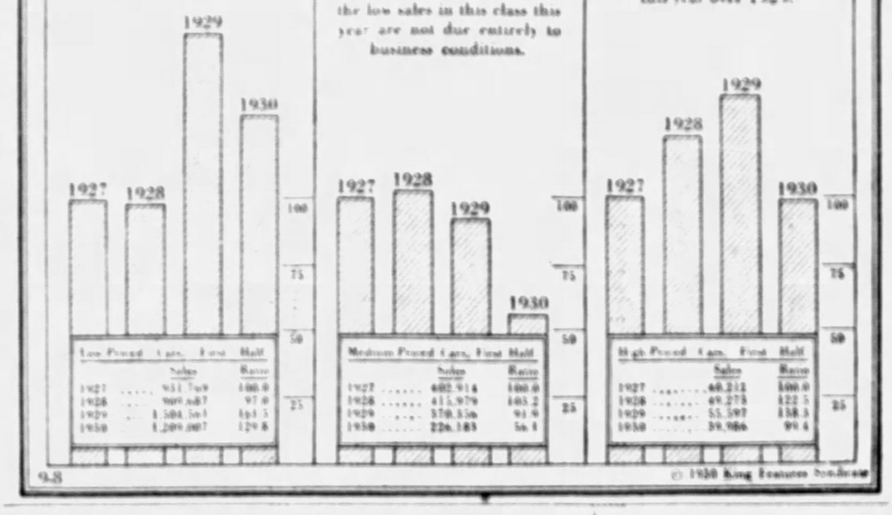
Buick, Chevrolet, Studebaker, Nash, Hudson, Graham, Hupmobile, Willys-Knight, Auburn, Reo, Marmon

This class, being in the middle, suffers from attacks of both sides. The small 3% increase in 1928 over 1927 was due to the big increase in the high-priced field. The 11% decrease in 1929 went almost entirely to the low-priced field, as did the 39% decrease in 1930. Therefore the low sales in this class this year are not due entirely to business conditions.

HIGH-PRICED CARS

Packard, La Salle, Cadillac, Franklin, Pierce-Arrow, Lincoln

The 28% decrease in sales in this class this year is attributable almost entirely to the business depression. Few of its possible sales have gone to the other two classes. It is interesting to know that of the 23 cars used in these comparisons, only one—Pierce Arrow—increased its sales this year over 1929.



Ford August Output Was 99,142 Units

DETROIT, Sept. 8.—World production of Ford cars and trucks in August was 99,142. The production was less than for preceding months due to curtailed activities of branch assembly plants following the closing of the Rouge plant for the vacation and inventory period. These have since resumed. The July output was 133,035 and in August of 1929 was 205,634.

More Locomotives Shipped in August

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—August shipments of railroad locomotives from principal manufacturing plants totaled 77, as compared with 56 in July, 129 in August 1929 and 34 in August 1928. Shipments for the year to date amounted to 552, against 517 in 1929 and 394 in 1928, according to the Department of Commerce.

DAILY TRUE STORY

The Price of Love

"Don't think I want to spoil things for you, old man, I know the woman, that's all." John spoke evenly.

Bob turned on him, his face flushed, his eyes blazing.

"Oh, no; you aren't trying to spoil things, not much. You don't expect me to believe all the rot you've told me. I tell you she loves me." He was in a quarrelsome mood, angry and excited.

John interrupted him with a gesture of impatience.

"Bobby, don't be a fool. It's your money she's after. If she loved you she wouldn't spoil your career. Don't run headlong into a thing like this, wait a bit, the waiting won't hurt either of you."

"Who says she'll ruin my career? She's an inspiration. I tell you." Bob answered angrily.

"What makes you think she doesn't love me, think I'm too young? Well, she's turned down older men for me, they think they are losing out. That's why you're interfering, used to be sweet on her yourself. Well, it won't do any good. She's going to marry me, that speaks for itself, don't it?"

John arose and walked to the window. Bob's last remark made him realize what a fool he had been. Bob was young, had his life before him and John determined to save that young life from ruin at any cost. If he wouldn't listen to reason, then there were other ways of convincing him. He could imagine a kid like Bob the fire of youth in his veins, being induced to beg for her caresses. The thought sickened him. He remembered the days when he had lavished his own affections and money on her until he discovered that the prize went to the highest bidder.

Dangerous Pace

Bob, angered by his silence, turned on him in fury.

"Got nothing to say to that. Well you might as well hold your tongue for all the good it'll do. We are going to be married in two weeks and nobody can stop us, you or anybody else, get that."

John looked at him in silence, turning over in his mind various plans by which Bob could be jolted out of his present dangerous pace. He was in the race with spurs and no bridle and there was sure to be a smash. It would take a sharp thrust to break the colt. Suddenly he hit upon a plan.

"Oh well, if you will you will and there's nothing more to be said I suppose."

John shrugged his shoulders and glancing at his watch, walked toward the door.

"It's an ideal night for a sail, what about having supper on board the Marion?" He asked casually.

Bob looked sulky and remained silent.

"Doing anything special tonight?" John asked, glancing back at him.

"Nothing particular unless Nanon gets back, she's been out of town for the day."

"Oh, very well, come along if you like, I'll be on board by eight."

So Nanon had been out of town, that might alter things a bit, still John decided to take the chance. Luck favored him and an hour later Nanon sat beside him in his blue roadster. At the sound of her voice, low and vibrant, he remembered the old fascination that used to steal over him like some deadly drug. She sat unnecessarily close to him. He wondered how he was going to get through the night.

Board Yacht

"John dear, why have you neglected me so?" She laid her hand over his on the wheel.

"It's heavenly, being here beside you again, darling." She bore softly on the darling, her voice caressing in its tone.

John was silent, he tried to remember why she was there, for what purpose, and that she was after the strange millions via the easiest route. Somehow when he looked at her, soft and appealing, he found it hard to believe.

They boarded the yacht, Nanon going on to the forward deck, while John stopped to speak to the steward. When he joined her she was leaning against the deck rail. The gleam of the moonlit waters lent a fairy-like loveliness to the slim figure. It was one of her old tricks, to choose her setting. Just at that moment John hated himself for the fool he had been.

She was one of those women who so deeply arouse passion in a man that he is apt to be swept into the belief that his feeling for her includes love. It was at this stage Bob had arrived. John had experienced it, other men had no doubt gone through it. It lowered a man's ideal of love, it shattered his illusions to such an extent that he became all turned about and was apt to lose his bearings.

Still cool what it might he had brought her here for one purpose. Bob might arrive at any moment. He stretched out his arm and drew her to him. It sickened him to think how readily she yielded to his embrace when Bob poor fool thought she belonged to him.

With a sigh of content she sank in his arms. John remembered of old how the softness of her seemed to press close and become a part of him. Threaded through the disgust he felt at her touch ran the thought of Bob, the fire of his youth whipped into fury by the spur of her embrace. Love like that if Bob called it love would burn out everything worthwhile in his young life.

Bob Strikes John

John felt her lips on his cheek, then warm and fragrant they rested for a moment on his lights. Suddenly he caught her in his arms and enacted again the old madness that possessed him at her nearness. He felt her slim hands on his face, her soft warm body pressed close to him. Bob's face floated hazily before him.

Sud enly a voice broke the stillness.

"So—that's the kind of dog you are?"

John was on his feet in an instant. Nanon stared with wide questioning eyes at the infuriated Bob, who addressed himself to John.

"You snake, you low down cad," he hissed through clenched teeth, striking John a blow full across the face.

Nanon was on her feet in a flash, she stood silent, watching with bated breath.

John caught Bob by the shoulders.

"Look here, old man," he began.

"Look here, nothing," yelled Bob, thrusting his fist forward, striking John a tremendous blow under the jaw that sent him reeling back. His head hit the rail as he fell. For a moment he felt dazed, a thin trickle of blood was running down his face. Reaching for his handkerchief he whiped it away and pulled himself up to a sitting position.

Pleads With Bob

Bob glared at him savagely. "Serves you right," he growled, turning to Nanon.

In an instant her arms were around him.

"It was all an ugly trick to separate us, darling. Oh I'm so glad you came, please, please, take me home." Her voice was low and pleading.

John watched them, it was the last stretch, would Bob come through like a thoroughbred.

For a moment Bobby stood silent, his young face white and drawn, his dark eyes full of the anguish of thwarted youth. He met John's gaze with a defiant look, then looking down at Nanon, an expression of utter contempt swept over his face, and with a rough gesture he flung her arms from him.

"Don't touch me again, I'm through." His voice was hoarse and his dark eyes blazing.

"I've heard of your kind before. Well, you can do your gold digging in other fields." His tone was final, leaving no room for argument.

Silently he passed Nanon and rang the electric bell just inside the cabin door.

Nanon ran to him, frantic. "What are you going to do Bobby?" she asked in a frightened voice.

He shook her hand from his arm with a savage gesture. The steward appeared in answer to the bell.

"Clayton, call a cab for Miss Bruin, she'll be waiting in the cabin." He turned abruptly and left her.

Nanon started after him, then hesitated, and without looking as John turned and followed Clayton into the cabin.

John rose unsteadily to his feet and leaned against the deck rail. He put his hand to his head, there was a sharp pain in his temple and he felt a bit giddy, but he smiled. That was a small matter since the colt had come through.

Electric Locomotives Offer Hope of Relief

The Pennsylvania Railroad, while electrifying its lines between New York and Washington, and between Philadelphia and Harrisburg, says the volume of traffic in the Pittsburgh district is not large enough to justify making the same improvement here. This is a rather surprising statement in view of Pittsburgh's reputation as one of the world's greatest sources of freight tonnage.

Hope of relief from railroad smoke is held out, however, by the invention of Diesel-electric locomotives. It is true that H. W. Jones, the Pennsylvania's superintendent of motive power, throws cold water on the prospect for the introduction of these engines in the Pittsburgh region in the near future. He says in the present state of their development the Diesel locomotives are not powerful enough to haul heavy loads.

But the rapid improvement that is made in nearly all mechanical contrivances nowadays within a few years after they are first given to the world—witness the improvements in automobiles, radio receivers and numerous other devices invented in recent years—encourages the belief that the Diesel engines, too, will soon be made capable of hauling heavy loads.

In the meantime, it is to be hoped the Chamber of Commerce will continue its efforts for railroad electrification.

Congressman Porter's Work Is Bearing Fruit

If the late Congressman Stephen G. Porter continues to observe, from "the undiscovered country from whose bourne no traveler returns," the progress of the things in which he was interested while he sojourned on earth, he will be pleased by a report just issued by James N. Lightner, chief of the State Bureau of Narcotic Control. Mr. Lightner announces that the number of drug addicts registered in the bureau during the last six months is the lowest on record.

He attributes the reduction of drug addiction in Pennsylvania to efficient enforcement of the federal and state narcotic laws. As Congressman Porter had much to do with the preparation of the federal legislation the improvement in the situation may properly be considered as the fruit of his labors.

But Mr. Lightner adds that "the problem is still a major one in this Commonwealth and will likely remain so for some time to come." Let us hope that a successor to Mr. Porter will be found who will carry on with equal zeal and ability the Pittsburgh congressman's splendid fight against the narcotic evil.

Government Can Reduce Number of Unemployed

Everything that government and business, collectively and individually, can do to reduce unemployment ought to be done, and that quickly.

Much can be done before winter sets in.

Instead of reducing the armed forces of the United States, they should be promptly recruited—the Army, Navy and Marine Corps—to the full strength authorized for peace time.

Instead of curtailing the postal service in city, town and country, its facilities everywhere should be utilized to the utmost.

Instead of slowing up the building program for the Navy, it should be speeded up, for naval ships can be built more economically now than later.

Instead of adhering to a building program for housing the Army that will require a decade or more to complete, a new building program for this purpose should be adopted as soon as Congress convenes and rushed to completion within the next few years.

Instead of reducing the number of skilled employes at government navy yards, all now on the rolls should be kept there and every effort made to find new work to keep them occupied.

Now is the time for government everywhere to practice what it preaches to business and increase the number of the employed instead of adding to the ranks of the unemployed.

And now is the time for the administration at Washington to set an example for the government in the several states, and offer encouragement to business everywhere, by talking less and doing more to relieve unemployment and hasten the return of normal prosperity.

Immigrants

We Want the Best Only.

Crime and unemployment, both big questions, are also the two biggest arguments in favor of SELECTIVE immigration into the United States.

In the past, anybody could come here—and did. Later, we put bars up against the least desirable, and limited the desirable.

It is now time to ask ourselves why, in our immigration policy, we should not admit only the BEST.

We can use the best blood and best brains of Europe, if they want to come here.

We cannot use the worst blood and worst brains of Europe or any other place. We have enough bad blood and bad brains of our own without importing more.

Our next door neighbor, Canada, wisely admits only those immigrants who will not swell the ranks of the unemployed or the criminal classes.

The United States can do the same by applying the principle of SELECTIVE immigration, admitting those foreigners who are needed in the nation's household, excluding those that are not.

PERCIVAL LOWELL

By Archibald Henderson

Posthumous fame!

How ironical this is in connection with Percival Lowell! In his lifetime, he was famous in a certain way. Yet his fame was somewhat tinged with notoriety. The public press teemed, with stories of Mars, of a queer race of beings known as Martians, of colossal canals intersecting the surface of that fascinating planet, gigantic feats of engineering which dwarfed the pyramids of Egypt, the Forth Bridge, the Tower of Babel or the Woolworth tower. Lowell was the most brilliant narrator and leading expert on Mars. But his clever writings about Mars were guesses, surmises, conjectures—the vivid projections of an imaginative brain. No one—not even Lowell—knew whether Mars was inhabited or whether the striations on it were optical delusion, channels to carry water for irrigation or green bands of vegetation. Lowell's life-work in astronomy, apparently, was the fruitless pursuit of a shadow.

Now, 14 years after his death, his scientific genius and prescience are abundantly confirmed in the spectacular discovery of the ninth major planet at the very observatory he had founded for the purpose of making that discovery! Thus does science vindicate and reward, even posthumously, the most faithful of her votaries.

A cousin of James Russell Lowell, the brother of President A. Lawrence Lowell, of Harvard, and of the late Amy Lowell, famous poet, Percival Lowell amply fulfilled the promise of his heredity. Born in Boston on March 13, 1855, he was graduated from Harvard in 1876.

From childhood on, he displayed the greatest interest in the heavens, and even before graduation, he began to write about the nebular hypothesis. As a writer and lecturer he was extraordinarily gifted, having the faculty of Flammarion and Verne of writing about science as if it were romance incarnate.

For a time, Lowell went into business; and later visited the East, making detailed studies of Japan and Korea. For Japan and her people he cherished a warm regard, which was reciprocated.

He wrote a number of books, which won high praise for their vivid qualities and faithful interpretation of the Oriental spirit. Mention should be made of these works: "Choson, the Land of the Morning Calm." "The Soul of the Far East," "Noto, an Unexplored Corner of Japan," and "Occult Japan, or the Way of the Gods." His active interest in Eastern affairs was likewise displayed in 1894, when he served as counselor and foreign secretary to the Korean Special Commission to the United States.

The Italian astronomer, Schiaparelli, was the first scientist to make a constructive study of the planet Mars. Although Lowell followed in his footsteps, he far surpassed Schiaparelli, in the literary skill of his writings, the sweep of his imagination, and the acuteness of his conjectures regarding Mars, its "canals," and countless other problems connected therewith.

In 1894, Lowell saw erected at Flagstaff, Ariz., the observatory, to the founding of which he had devoted his energies and his fortune. One of his chief purposes in founding it was to make a detailed study of Mars, another was to locate a hypothetical trans-Neptunian planet.

Great posthumous fame now comes to Lowell, in the discovery of Planet "X."

-:- LISTEN, WORLD -:-

By Elsie Robinson

What's the greatest service a woman with a college education can perform for her family?

The same old round of chores that grandma and mother did before her? Peeling onions, frying steak, doing dishes? Using time and energy for chores that any illiterate laborer can do as well, if not better? Is THAT an intelligent woman's most valuable contribution to her family and society at large?

Smith College has been asking that question. It has made a survey of the thousands of girls who graduate yearly. At 20 these girls face life, eager, alert, ambitious for themselves and their prospective children. By the time they are 30 most of them have married. Unless they have married men with more than average income, they must do their own housework. If there are children, that means that they must spend their days in a dull routine of domestic duties. Many highly sentimental eulogies have been written about such duties, but they have NOT been written by the ladies doing them. Ladies who spend from 12 to 16 hours per day "doin' housework" and tending babies do not write eulogies nor anything else. Nor do they read. Nor attend lectures. Nor keep up their music. They become robots . . . with dented disposition, and busted arches.

Is that economy? Is that the best use that can be made of female brains and tax-payers' money?

Smith College thinks it isn't. It believes that a woman can do something better than that, for herself, her family and her community. So its institute for the Co-ordination of Women's Interests at Smith College has been conducting a novel experiment "for the solution of the dilemma of married college women." For nine months, the meals of 35 families were supplied from a central cooking establishment. . . the wives and mothers being thus released for other forms of service. In the time which they had formerly spent in such manual labor, they now sewed, attended classes, went to lectures and concerts and generally built up the mental and social atmosphere of their homes. When their children returned from school and their husbands from office, they were no longer met by weary, irritable drudges but by stimulating, refreshing comrades . . . by women who were continuing and spreading that cultural program which college life had begun.

Sounds interesting, doesn't it?

And show me the woman, college bred or otherwise, who won't applaud the plan. But not so various male members of our great American press. According to these Big Boys, Smith College is raising Cain with the American home.

"And so," bellows one outraged gentleman, "a great institution devoted to the 'higher education' and the uplifting of American womanhood unblushingly teaches its scholars it is right and proper for a married college woman to neglect her home, her husband and her children."

And he really means it. He really thinks that if a woman doesn't scrape her own carrots and bake her own muffins, she is "neglecting her home."

IT WOULD BE AS SENSIBLE TO SAY THAT IF A MAN DOESN'T EMPTY HIS OWN WASTE BASKET AND WASH HIS OWN OFFICE WINDOWS, HE IS NEGLECTING HIS BUSINESS.

Men do not waste energy and intelligence that is worth two dollars an hour on chores that can be done for twenty-five cents an hour. WHY SHOULD WOMEN? Men have organized business so that they may get the maximum profit out of time and brains. WHY SHOULDN'T WOMEN?

A woman's brain should be as valuable an asset in the home as a man's brains are in the office. A college education should help her elevate her home life, as it helps her husband improve his industrial status. It's as wrong to waste a trained woman mind on peeling potatoes as it would be to waste a trained man mind on cleaning cuspidors. Mama should mean more than that!

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS.

Summer Dreams

Lying prone beneath the vines
Where the sunlight dimly shines,
Touched by spells the forest weaves
Into green light through green leaves,
In this chrysoprase retreat
I have fled the summer's heat.

Oaks and elm trees touch the sky,
Thick vines clinging, climbing high;
Ardent sunlight, drifting through,
Deepens, takes an emerald hue,
Vine leaves lifted, stirred by breeze,
Move like green waves on green seas.

Lying prone beneath the vines
Where green-filtered sunlight shines,
Tossing vine leaves, stirred by breeze,
Lift like waves of emerald seas,
I am lying far below,
Over me green waters flow;
Emerald waters, cool and deep,
As the happy tides of sleep.

The revolutions in South America are merely an indication of the great unrest among the scenario writers.

"Bugs" Baer

That thing in Bazoo wasn't very important. The President merely joined a group of cooked tourists and marched out, reading from left to right.

It was a bloodless revolution. Due mostly to bad marksmanship and worse intentions. It may have been the other way round. That's the way the President went.

Some people think it was Amos and Andy. During the hot summer months in Bazoo the southern Bazooians get very irritable. All the windows in the presidential palace are open to trap the breezes.

Therefore, a citizen riding on a borrowed mule hears Amos talking out of 500 windows and Andy answering him out of 1,000 windows and 17 chimneys.

The same thing happens in our air shaft. There are exactly 77 radios in the building and everybody has Amos and Andy for dinner. Unfortunately, we cannot start a coup d'etat as an airshaft has no president.

Our diplomats, who are thinking this season, seem to blame the unfortunate results of the last successful election on miniature golf.

It seems that the President of Bazoo converted the presidential sunken gardens into a Tom Finger golf sanitarium.

The sunken gardens of Bazoo are famous in fable and other government budgets. Heroes of Bazoo have sat around for centuries watching the sunken gardens sink in the west.

It was an affront to patriotism when the President bought a sub-caliber putter and started chipping his native land up into alien divots.

While the President was whacking away at the midget landscape with the administration elbows, the malcontents held a monster meeting on a soap box. Was Bazoo a nation or a drum that should be thumped all night by a maniac with a niblick?

The result was the revolution. They chased the President loose from his charter. The President is temporarily on an ankle excursion in another country, but he is a good girl who rides back from a walk.

There is nothing serious about the whole matter except the details. Take it in a lump it's dough. Separate it and it's biscuits.

But no fire can be very bad when the firemen has to carry a lantern to find it. That's what we have always claimed and we have looked at some important catalogues.

We might call out the Army and Navy. But first, we would have to make the Marines promise not to whip them.

THE SCIENCE OF LIFE

By H. G. WELLS
In Collaboration With
Prof. Julian Huxley and George P. Wells.

Without variation, however, the struggle would bear no fruit for life. If all individuals in a species were exactly alike, then it must be a mere question of luck which failed, and the struggle for existence could not alter the characteristics of the species. Or if they differed, but their differences were not inherited, it would not matter from the evolutionary point of view which went under.

We may perhaps quote Darwin himself to show how he envisaged the struggle and its results in one of the higher animals:

H. G. Wells

"Let us take the case of a wolf, which preys on various animals, securing some by craft, some by strength, and some by fleetness; and let us suppose that the fleetest prey—a deer, for instance — had from any change in the country increased in numbers, or that other prey had decreased in numbers, during that season of the year when the wolf was hardest pressed for food.

"Under such circumstances the swiftest and slimmest wolves would have the best chance of surviving and so be preserved or selected—provided always that they retained strength to master their prey at this or some other period of the year, when they were compelled to prey on other animals.

"I can see no more reason to doubt that this would be the result than that man should be able to improve the fleetness of his greyhounds by careful and methodical selection or by that kind of unconscious selection which follows from each man trying to keep the best dogs without any thought of modifying the breed."

It was this shifting of variations—the automatic preservation of the favorable and elimination of the unfavorable—which Darwin meant by natural selection. It would be quite inoperative without inherited variations. But given that, it explains the process of evolution with a completeness approached by no other explanation.

Opponents of Darwin make a great difficulty of the co-relation of variations, the way in which a change here must correspond to a change there, if a new proportion or feature is to be established.

If a stag is to carry 20 pounds, weight of antlers, on his head, not only must the skull have a different construction from that of a hind, but the tendons which hold up the neck must be stronger, the muscles more powerful, the blood supply richer and so on. How is it to be imagined, they argue, that all these variations came concurrently into being? For the antlers would be impossible without the rest.

Our study of development has enabled us to see that the difficulty is only apparent. The tissues of the body are so responsive to the demands made upon them that all the needed adjustments are simultaneously and automatically called out during individual development by the change in weight.

A vast amount of the detailed adjustment of the body is of this sort, dependent not on racial adaptation, but on the functional adaptations of the individual. And the existence of all this functional adaptation means that there is so much less for mutation and natural selection to do.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—Diary of a modern Pepys: Stirred by a hulabaloo in the street and a Park avenue burgher in tails and silk hat was on the loose and a constable led him away, still shouting. So to my barber where I dropped to sleep again and he let me sleep an hour.

At high noon with my wife to a wedding and the groom a statue in chalk and to see Rube Goldberg, newly home from Hollywood. Thence walking the avenue and home where came evening shirts from Jim Oviatt, which will not pop like a new saddle when bowing.

Labored and with Mike and Alice Hogg along Post road, stopping at an Italian inn near Mamaroneck but irritated the management wanting nothing to drink save iced tea. Reading "Andromeda in Wimpole Street," the romance of Elizabeth Barrett Browning, until late.

My Hollywood under-cover man relays a pointless story of Gloria Swanson, Bebe Daniels and the Spanish shawl. Miss Swanson wore the shawl to a party. Miss Daniels gurgled her admiration and was forced to accept it as a gift. Two weeks later Miss Swanson dropped in to see Miss Daniels. The shawl decorated a piano lid. And why not? Piano lids, balconies or ash cans are the place for them.

* * *

Window shopping high lights: A white heart cigaret lighter for Milady. Neckties, hose and handkerchiefs in black and white for gentlemen. A mother of pearl lipstick with diamond solitaire. Hand mirrors with white background. A white cane with black knob for evening. Polo coats of white cashmere. It looks like a white winter.

Personal nomination for the dandiest girl I have ever known—Mrs. O. O. McIntyre.

Every metropolitan theater may be emptied in five minutes. All are fireproof. The most horrible theater fire in the history of the town was the Brooklyn Theater, 50 years ago. The dead totaled 300. "The Two Orphans" was playing when flames licked out of the ceiling. There were no fire escapes and only four small exits.

Something I've never seen in New York: An aproned housewife with head turbaned in a black cloth, using a feather duster.

And I wonder if there are any old-fashioned people left who just come into a room at parties instead of "making an entrance."

To the Broadway consciousness every butter and egg man hails from Oswego. This is coupled with the hoary theory every yap is a product of Oshkosh. A note from a head waiter says in years of greeting out-of-towners in a sucker establishment he never met a person from Oswego or Oshkosh.

A rich fop, who made a fortune interior decorating, has shirts especially dyed in pastel tints by Charvet in Paris. And wears, the sis, ribbon bow cuff links. I don't want to be around when he sits down. An edging of lace might show.

An impressive event of last week concerns the personal service of a laundry, whose slogan is: "Let us be a mother to you!" A month ago, a bachelor—Bernard Sobel, if you are a hound for details—leaping into his shorts, found a top button gone. Casting about for a substitute he got results with a paper clip. The clip remained when it went to the laundry and came back slightly rusty. On the second visit it was more rusted. But on the third trip where the rusty clip recently was—a bright and untarnished new clip gleamed.

Billy Joe, a character in our town, recently observed: "I wish I had as much to eat as I know where the courthouse is."

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

Are you one of those in your place of employment, in your church, society or lodge who plans to allot the disagreeable and laborious things to a certain person?

This person may be good-natured and have a desire to please.

You take advantage of his willing spirit and assign him irksome duties.

Do you when a certain job is turned over to you, immediately seek this one you think of as "easy" and load on the hard work, while you perform that which is least disagreeable and will bring you the most credit?

You may excuse yourself by saying you are the executive and this other person merely one who can carry out orders or the plans you make.

And to an extent it may be true, but there is something to giving a person an opportunity to show whether he has ability as a leader.

Isn't it true that you use him for his expert experience in some way and then claim all the credit for a piece of work well done—by him?

And you think you are a fair-minded dealer with men, do you?

You are gaining prestige for the superior work of a subordinate to whom you give no credit.

Are you doing the fair thing by the one who serves you so well?

If you are too small to credit another with what he earns you are not large enough for an important job.

ISN'T IT SO?

Early to bed and early to rise, takes the neighbors by surprise.

When a knocking takes place in the engine of your car opportunity is knocking for some repair man.

A pretty stocking advertisement seems to attract more attention from the men than it does from the women.

A bridal path often leads to the warpath.
